AND BENEFACTOR OF BUCKNELL UNIVERSITY,
WE RESPECTFULLY
DEDICATE THIS WORK

ERNEST L. TUSTIN, SENATOR

Hon. Ernest Leigh Tustin, A. M.

Ernest Leigh Tustin was born in Lewisburg, in 1862. He became a student at Bucknell, and was graduated with the highest honors of his class in 1884. After graduation he took up the study of law with Hon. S. P. Wolverton, of Sunbury, Pa., and was admitted to the bar in 1887. During the same year he removed to Philadelphia, where he turned his attention to mercantile and corporate law, in which he soon acquired and still enjoys a large and lucrative practice.

Mr. Tustin has also been very successful in his business relations. In several instances he has assumed charge of insolvent enterprises and from them has formed large and successful corporations. At the present time he is Vice-President and Treasurer of the Wm. H. Hoskins Co., Philadelphia, and President of the Rohde-Haskins Co., of New York.

In addition to the demands made upon him in his business and legal career, he has taken much interest in charitable, educational and religious affairs. He is President of the Board of Trustees of the First Baptist Church, of Philadelphia, and for the past sixteen years has been Superintendent of its Sunday School. He is Treasurer of the Wisler Memorial Home for Aged Couples, and of the Pennsylvania Baptist Education Society, a Trustee of Bucknell University, the American Baptist Publication Society, the Pennsylvania State Mission Society, Hahnemann Medical College and Philadelphia Board of Trade.

In social life, he is a member of the Union League, the University Club, Lawyers' Club, Overbrook Golf Club, Sons of the Revolution, the Colonial Society, William Hamilton Lodge, No. 500, F. & A. M., the Netherland Society and Historical Society.

In National and State politics Mr. Tustin is an ardent Republican. In the fall of 1905 he was nominated by the Republican party in West Philadelphia as their candidate for State Senator, and was elected by a large majority. His legislative career in Harrisburg has been marked by great activity in financial, hygienic and educational matters. He is the author of the new Pure Food Law recently passed by the Legislature.

Mr. Tustin's father, Francis Wayland Tustin, was one of the founders and officers of Bucknell University. His mother was graduated from one of the first classes in the Seminary, and his sister, Mrs. I. H. O'Harra, is also a graduate of the Institute, and for a time was an instructor therein.

Editor's Note

AGAIN, kind readers, we place the annual issue of the L'Agenda in your hands. Upon its pages we have endeavored to preserve not only an accurate and complete record of events of the college year, but we have also endeavored to add to our book some new features which we trust will be pleasing to you. If, in perusing the pages of this volume, you find that you are fortunate enough to receive honorable mention, we trust that you will appreciate the favor we have conferred upon you in thus placing you on the fair road to fame. In criticising our work please remember that we have labored with love for our class and for our college, and whatever may be the shortcomings of this book, it represents a sincere desire to please and not to offend.

HUGO B. C. RIEMER ('01), A. B., M. D., A. A.,
SURGEON, P. H. and M. H. S.

Dr. Hugo Bruno Carl Riemer was born in Germany and came to America as a child. He attended the public schools of Pennsylvania for eight years, the Clarion State Normal School for one year, and Bucknell Academy for two years, and entered the Classical Course of Bucknell University in 1898. In college he was President of his class during the Freshman year and winner of the "Prize of the Class of '71" and of the "Sophomore Declamation Prize." He was a member of the college football team for four seasons, being honored with the captaincy of the team for two successive years. In field sports he took an active part and won a place on the relay team for four seasons, resulting in three gold watches and one silver loving cup. He was captain of the relay team in 1899. He was initiated into Phi Gamma Delta in 1898.

Dr. Riemer left Bucknell at the end of his Junior year to study medicine at Harvard. He was awarded two scholarships for excellence in medical studies, and graduated with honors at that institution in 1904. Immediately after graduation he took one year of practice in one of the Boston city hospitals, and entered the Government service the succeeding year. He finished his course at Bucknell in 1906, and was given the A. B. degree. Dr. Riemer is still connected with the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service at Boston, Mass. His duties are to make medical inspection of aliens who arrive at the port of Boston. He is a member of Boston's St. John's Lodge of Free Masons, the oldest lodge of Free Masonry in America, and also of the Boston Athletic Association, Boston's exclusive social and athletic club.

MILTON G. EVANS, D. D.

Class of 1882. Professor of Christian Theology in Crozer Theological Seminary.

CHARLES EDWARD GOOD-
ALL, '02.

Charles E. Goodall was born in Drighlington, Yorkshire, England. His youth was spent in England and in Canada. He received his early education in the public schools of New Jersey, and South Jersey Institute, class of 1898, and graduated from Bucknell with the class of 1902 with the A. B. and A. M. degrees. Mr. Goodall then went to Crozer Theological Seminary and graduated in 1905. He then spent the year of 1906 at Oxford University, England. In early life Mr. Goodall was connected with the Church of England. He was licensed to preach in 1899 and ordained to the gospel ministry November 23d, 1906. Mr. Goodall traveled in Texas and California in 1904, and in France and Italy part of 1905 and 1906. While in the Seminary he served as pastor of the Westmont Baptist Church, and for a while was assistant pastor of the Linden Baptist Church, of Camden, N. J. He settled at Huntingdon, Pa., January 1st, 1907, where he is president of the Huntingdon Ministerial Association. While in college he was manager of the football team, captain of the track team, member of the relay team for four years, and of the basketball team for one year. In society life he was a member of Phi Gamma Delta, Theta Delta Tau, and also of the Dramatic Club.

ROMEYN H. RIVENBURG,
'97, A. B., A. M.

R. H. Rivenburg entered Keystone Academy in 1891 and completed the classical course in two years, graduating as valedictorian of his class. At Keystone he won prizes in Latin and oratory. In the fall of 1893 he entered Bucknell, and graduated in 1897 with the A. B. degree, Summa Cum Laude. The following June he received his A. M. degree. While in college he was a member of the Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity, class tennis team in Sophomore and Junior years, president of his class and associate editor of Bucknell Mirror, and editorial writer and editor-in-chief in his Senior year. In the fall of 1897 he was appointed instructor in the Preparatory Department of Peddie Institute. The following year he taught part of the mathematics in the regular course, and the next year he was appointed head of the Department of Mathematics, which position he has held for the past eight years. He served as Vice-Principal of Peddie for one year.

WILLIS YARDLEY WELCH.

Willis Yardley Welch was born at Searsburg, Schuyler County, N. Y. He studied in the common schools of New York until he began teaching, in his sixteenth year. Two years later he entered Starkney Seminary, N. Y., going from there to Union Christian College, Merom, Ind., where he was interrupted, in his Senior year, by sickness. After recovery he taught in Indiana, Illinois and New York for several years. After taking a three years' course in free-hand, mechanical, pattern and architectural drawing in the Rochester, N. Y., Athenaeum and Mechanic Institute, he entered the Oswego, N. Y., Normal School, from which he graduated with highest honors in 1899. For a time he was Assistant Instructor in Science and Nature Study at Oswego Normal School, from which position he retired in 1899 to take charge of the Science Department in the Normal School at Clarion, Pa. Prof. Welch has specialized in Psychology, Pedagogy, Science and Nature Study and Literature at Cornell. At the Clarion Normal he has built up the Science Department until it is now considered to be one of the best in the State. Prof. Welch has done much commendable institute work. His lecture on the "Psychology of the Development of the Number Idea" is a scholarly production. Prof. Welch has contributed to educational periodicals on science and mathematical themes, and is the author of the Chemical Laboratory Manual now in use in the Clarion Normal. Bucknell conferred the degree of M. S. on Prof. Welch in 1907.

GEORGE W. WAGENSELLER, A. M., '92.

George Washington Wagenseller, now an influential citizen of Middleburg, Snyder County, Pa., was born in Selingsgrove, Pa., April 27, 1868, the son of William J. Wagenseller and his wife, Rebecca, whose maiden name was Forrer. Mr. Wagenseller's early education was obtained in the High School and Susquehanna University at Selingsgrove. He entered the Junior class of Bucknell in the fall of 1890, graduating with the class of 1892. After leaving college, he taught for one year in the Coatesville Academy, and was for one year principal of Bloomfield Academy at Bloomfield, Pa. In March of 1894 Mr. Wagenseller entered the journalistic field, having acquired the Middleburg Post, a paper which has since borne his name as publisher and proprietor, and whose columns have obtained a reputation for being fearlessly and ably edited. The Post to-day holds the unique and unchallenged position of having a circulation equal to the combined issue of its three strongest competitors in Snyder County.

At school Mr. Wagenseller was one of the few men in college who provided, by personal efforts and savings, the necessary funds for his education, without going into debt or accepting financial help from anyone. He returned to his home in Selingsgrove, after graduation, with his diploma and ten cents in cash, but with debts all paid.

In the business world, Mr. Wagenseller's word is as good as his bond, and to-day he stands as a leading factor in every progressive movement, not only in his own town and county, but in many outside enterprises. He was the chief promoter of the Middlecreek Electric Company, a $150,000 corporation that furnishes light and power in Selingsgrove, Sunbury, Northumberland and other places, and holds one-fifth interest in the Selingsgrove and Freeburg Electric Street Railway Company, and is secretary of both corporations.

In his domestic life he is the father of two interesting daughters, Esther, born January 22, 1901, and Doris, born January 23, 1905.

HOWARD H. BALDRIDGE, '84.

Howard H. Baldrige was born in Hollidaysburg, Pa., in June, 1864. He entered the Freshman class of the University at Lewisburg, September, 1880, and graduated in 1884. He took a law course in the University of Pennsylvania, and studied law with Benjamin H. Brewster, Attorney-General in the President's cabinet. He was engaged in newspaper work for the Times, of Philadelphia, during his law course at the University of Pennsylvania in 1886-87. He moved to Omaha, Neb., in 1887, and was married to a daughter of Dr. H. T. Coffey, of Peoria, on September 25, 1889. He has been engaged in the practice of law in Omaha from August, 1887, until the present time. In March, 1889, he was appointed Assistant United States District Attorney of Nebraska, in which office he served four years. He was elected District Attorney of Douglas County, Neb., in 1894 and re-elected in 1896. He was elected to the Nebraska State Senate in 1901, and has taken an active part in Republican politics in Nebraska, having been chairman of the Republican State Convention in 1904. He was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States in 1902, and is President of the Omaha Bar Association.

ELMER E. HESS, A. B.

Elmer E. Hess received the B. E. degree from Bloomsburg Normal School in 1891, and M. E. in 1892. He taught in the public schools from 1891-1894, and was Principal of the Comans Schools from 1894-1896, after which he was for two years Professor of English Grammar, Theory, Physics and Political and Physical Geography in the Academic Department of Susquehanna University. Mr. Hess entered Bucknell in 1898 and took the A. B. degree in 1900, and the A. M. in 1902. Since graduating from Bucknell he has held three principalships—the first from 1900-1903 in the Huntingdon High School at Huntingdon, Pa., the second from 1903-1905 at Cress Fork, Pa., the third from 1905-1907 in the High School at Coatesville, Pa., and is now Supervising Principal of the schools at Oxford, Pa. Mr. Hess was for three years a member of the permanent Certificate Committee.

REV. JAMES McLEAN PATERSON, '92.

Rev. James McLean Paterson was born in Glasgow, Scotland. He was graduated from Bucknell in 1892, and from Crozer Seminary in 1895. His first pastorate was in Evans City, Pa., where he was pastor of the Amana Baptist Church for five years. From Evans City he was called to the First Baptist Church at New Kensington, Pa., and is now in the eighth year of his pastorate there. He has done good, substantial work in both places, having recently made extensive repairs at New Kensington. He is always ready to speak a good word for his Alma Mater and uses his influence to persuade young men to go there for their education.

HARLAND A. DENNEY.

Harland A. Denney, lawyer, was born at Equinunk, Pa., May 9th, 1867. He was graduated from Keystone Academy in 1889 and then spent two years at Bucknell. After this Mr. Denney read law with McCollum & Smith, Montrose, Pa., and was admitted to the bar of Susquehanna County at the August term of court, 1893. He commenced the practice of law in May, 1895, and was admitted to practice before the Superior Court of Pennsylvania on January 19th, 1903; and being elected District Attorney of Susquehanna County in 1904, he was re-elected to the same office without opposition in November, 1907, the three parties combining to elect him.

Mr. Denney was elected chairman of the Republican County Committee of Susquehanna County in January, 1908. He was Secretary of the Susquehanna County Legal Association, President of the Susquehanna County Historical Society and Free Library Association in 1905-1906, and is now its Vice-President and a Director.

Mr. Denney is a member of the Montrose Lodge of Odd Fellows, Warren Lodge of Masons, Warren Chapter, Great Bend Commandery Knights Templar, and Irem Temple, Mystic Shrine, of Wilkes-Barre.

E. O. BICKEL, '05.

E. O. Bickel was born in White Deer Township, Union County, in 1882. He began his educational career in the public schools of his district, afterwards entering Milton High School, from which he graduated in 1900. He taught for two years in White Deer Township. He resigned his work to enter Bucknell in 1901, and graduated with the Bachelor's degree in 1905. After graduating from college he served for two years as Principal of Reedsville High School. From this institution he went to New Windsor College, Md., where he is serving as Professor of Mathematics. He received the A. M. degree from Bucknell in June, 1907.

REV. GEORGE W. ALEXANDER, '01.

Rev. George W. Alexander was graduated from Bucknell with the class of 1901, with the degree of A. B., having also received his Academic training at Bucknell Academy. He was graduated from Crozer Theological Seminary in June, 1904, and received the degree of B. D. in 1905. Before entering upon his educational career, he held a position as bookkeeper in Philadelphia, and during his college course was bookkeeper in the Registrar's office. He was President of his class in his Junior year, and of the Y. M. C. A. in his Senior year. While taking the work of the Senior year at Crozer, in 1903, he assumed charge of a new suburban field at Glenside, Montgomery County, Pa. Here he organized the First Baptist Church and erected a modern building, thus establishing a church where both town and church have a promising future. He is now pastor of the First Baptist Church of Laurel, Md.

L. J. ULMER, '02.

L. J. Ulmer received his elementary education in the rural schools of Lycoming County, and graduated from Lycoming County Normal School in 1896. He then taught in the rural schools during the winter, taking some special work at Dickinson Seminary in the springs of 1897-98. In the fall of 1898 he entered the Freshman class of Bucknell. While in college he was closely associated with the Christian and literary organizations, and was a member of the Demosthenian Club. He graduated with the degree of Sc.B. in the class of 1902. In the summer of 1903 he took special work in Physics at the Harvard School, and studied Cryptogamic Botany at Cold Spring Harbor in the summer of 1905. In 1907 he received the Sc.M. degree from Bucknell. Since his graduation from Bucknell, he has been head of the Science Department in the Williamsport High School.

HARRY GARFIELD SNAVELY, '07.

Harry Garfield Snavely prepared in the Steelton High School, from which he graduated in 1898, and also in the Lock Haven Normal School. After graduating from the Normal he taught for three years, having in that time received experience in the various grades. During his last year of teaching he was Supervising Principal of the Enhaut schools. He entered Bucknell with the class of 1907 and graduated with that class, taking honors Summa Cum Laude. During the spring term of his Senior year he taught in the Shippensburg State Normal School. During the past summer he was elected head of the Department of Mathematics in the Centenary Collegiate Institute at Hackettstown, New Jersey, having three regular assistants and one substitute on his teaching force. While at college Mr. Snavely was active in all college interests and made an impregnable barrier on the football eleven.

W. NORMAN MORRIS, LL.B.

W. Norman Morris was born in Line Lexington, Montgomery County, Pa., September 28th, 1867. His home was the birthplace of his ancestors for a number of generations. His father, Oliver G. Morris, was a member of the State Legislature, and his uncle, Matthias Morris, represented his district in Congress.

Mr. Morris' early education was obtained in the local school. A three years' special course at the West Chester Normal School was followed by his entrance to Bucknell. After graduation he became Principal of the Merion Square High School, and at the same time studied law in the office of Hon. Wayne McVeagh and the late George Tucker Bispham, Esq. In 1891 he entered the law school of the University of Pennsylvania, graduating with the class of 1894.

Success has attended a close application to his profession, and he numbers among his clients some of Philadelphia's largest business houses and corporations. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Psi, the Tau Nu Epsilon, the Law Academy and the Business and Professional Men's Club.

A few years ago he married Miss Rebekah McDowell, daughter of the late Francis W. McDowell. Mr. Morris is Vice-President of the Bucknell Alumni Club of Philadelphia.

His law offices are at 1118-1120 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

EDWARD HERBERT DUTTON, '98.

Edward Herbert Dutton was graduated from Bucknell Academy in 1894, and from the college in 1898. During his course in Bucknell he was a leader. He won a place on the Commencement platform and also took a personal interest in all the activities of the college. While Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. he so enlarged the scope of the organization that even to-day his hand can be seen in some features of the work. In the fall of 1898 he entered Rochester Theological Seminary. At once he became a force in the life of the seminary and in the city Y. M. C. A. In the second year of his seminary course, because of his religious activities, he was made an associate of John R. Mott, in the international work of the Student Federation. After an absence of six months he returned to the seminary and was graduated in 1901. Before his graduation from the seminary he had accepted a call to a Baptist Church in Troy, New York. In Troy, among a working people in two years, he paid off a church mortgage of five thousand dollars, increased the pastor's salary and the offerings for beneficence, and led the church to support a missionary in the foreign field. His success in his first pastorate, his interest in foreign missions, his experience as a secretary and business man, opened a larger field—the secretaryship of the Baptist Young People's Missionary Movement, with headquarters in Boston. In this position he remained only one year, for the time was not ripe for the inauguration of a policy like that on which he had set his heart. From Boston he went to the Cedar Street Baptist Church in Buffalo, N. Y. Here, in a down-town church, he has done his characteristic, solid, constructive work. Recently a heavy debt was cleared, the church was renovated and a foundation laid for enlarged activities.

G. W. ENGLISH, '02.

G. W. English was born in Pittsburg, Pa., in 1882. He received his early education in the public schools of Pittsburg. Graduating from Pittsburg Academy in 1898, he entered Bucknell and graduated in 1902. While in college he was a member of Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity, Dramatic Club and Varsity Basketball team. After graduation he entered the employ of the Monongahela Furnaces of the National Tube Company, at McKeesport, Pa., where he became assistant superintendent. He resigned this position in April, 1907, to accept the position as superintendent of Cleveland Furnace Company, of Cleveland, Ohio. In 1906 he married Miss Esther B. Godcharles, of Milton, Pa.

REV. RAYMOND G. PIERSON, '01.

Rev. Raymond G. Pierson was born in Camden, N. J. He was educated in the public schools of Philadelphia, and graduated from Bucknell Academy in 1897, and from Bucknell University in 1901 with the Ph.B. degree. After graduating from Bucknell he attended the Divinity School of the University of Chicago. While at Chicago he was student pastor of the Waterman (Illinois) Baptist Church. After graduating from Chicago he was for two years pastor of the Baptist Church of Moundsville, W. Va. Leaving this pastorate, he became religious work director in Bedford Y. M. C. A. of Brooklyn, N. Y. Since July, 1907, he has been pastor of the South Baptist Church of Milwaukee, Wis., the second largest church of the city, having a membership of 425. Two missions are also under his care. While in college he was a member of the track team for four years, glee club one year, manager of the Mirror for two and one-half years, and assistant manager of the football team of '00. On June 14th, 1905, he was married to Miss Agatha D. Hequenbourg, of Dunkirk, N. Y., who graduated from Chicago University in '03.

N. E. HENRY, '05.

Norman Elwood Henry graduated with honors from the Williamsport High School. He entered Bucknell in 1901, where he specialized in Greek and Latin during his college course. He won the Herbert Goodman Barrows prize in Greek, and was appointed one of the Commencement speakers of his class. He served at various times as editor of the Commencement Daily News and assistant editor of the Orange and Blue, the L'Agenda and the Mirror. He received the degrees of A. B. and A. M. from his Alma Mater. After graduation he was retained as field representative of the Registrar for an extended period of time. In 1906 he was awarded a scholarship and entered the Graduate School of Yale, where he continued his studies in Latin and Greek, receiving the A. M. degree from Yale in June, 1907. He has chosen teaching as his profession.

CLAUDE G. LANGFORD, '91.

Claude Grinsley Langford was born and reared on a farm near Weston, W. Va. He prepared for college at the Mt. Pleasant Classical and Scientific Institute. After graduating from Mt. Pleasant he entered Bucknell, and graduated with the Class of 1891. He then went to Crozer Theological Seminary, where he received his theological education. Since graduating from Crozer he has been pastor at the following places: First Baptist Church, North Wales, Pa.; First Baptist Church, Pittston, Pa.; Moravia, N. Y.; the South Baptist Church, Elmira, N. Y., and is at present pastor at Wellsboro, Pa. Mr. Langford has been especially successful with men, having a Sunday school class of fifty-five. His personal work among men has resulted in leading many to a better life.

E. E. JOHNSON, '00.

Mr. E. E. Johnson was born in Lycoming County, Pa., on April 4th, 1877. He was educated in the Lewisburg public schools, graduating from the high school in 1894. After teaching one term in the Union County schools he spent a year at Bucknell Academy, and took up his college work in 1896, graduating in 1900, Cum Laude. He was a Commencement speaker, and received the Ph.B. degree, having specialized in biology. He continued his work in biology during the summer of 1900 at the Marine Biological Laboratory, Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, and received the degree of M. S. pro meritis at the Commencement of 1901. After graduation he taught science work in North Carolina College, Mt. Pleasant, N. C., and in the Carbondale and Shamokin high schools, Pa. He was elected to his present position in the North East Manual Training School (one of the best of its kind in the country) in September, 1907. He has a bright future before him.

A. GENEVIEVE WHITE, '00.

Augusta Genevieve White was born in Wellsburg, N. Y., September 15th, 1879. Both her parents were physicians. When she was nine years old they removed to Bedford, Pa., where she received her grammar and high school training. In 1900 she graduated from Bucknell University. The following year she entered the Homeopathic Medical College of the University of Michigan, and graduated from that institution in 1904, following the footsteps of her grandfather, her father and her mother. The next year Dr. White spent in the Woman's Homeopathic Hospital of Philadelphia, where she was interne. In September, 1905 she located in Rochester, N. Y., with Dr. Marcena Sherman-Ricker. Here she has an office with Dr. Ricker at 58 Lorimer Street, and at the same time is establishing an independent practice.

FRANK WATTERSON JACKSON, A. B. '95, A. M. '98.

Frank W. Jackson was born in Pennsylvania in 1874. He prepared for college at the Mt. Pleasant Classical and Scientific Institute, from which school he received the $300 cash prize for scholarship. After his graduation from Bucknell, in 1895, he returned to Mt. Pleasant Institute as Head Master of Greek, and held the position for five consecutive years. During this period he studied Greek Language and Literature at the University of Chicago, under the late Dr. Seymour, of Yale University, and in 1898, in connection with this work, received his Master's degree. In 1901 President McKinley appointed Mr. Jackson a Consul to Greece. During his sojourn in Greece he traveled extensively and wrote numerous articles for American magazines. Two years later he resigned his post on account of the ill health of his family, and returning to America he located in New York City, where he is head of a large Greek corporation controlled by the National Bank of Greece. Mr. Jackson has built up a business of large proportions, and his house enjoys the distinction of being the largest importers of Greek products in America. He continues to keep in touch with educational work, and has been for a number of years lecturer for the Board of Education of New York City. He was married in 1898 to Miss Markle, of Pennsylvania.

T. R. JONES, '62.

Thomas Rockafellow Jones was born in Northumberland County, Pa. He graduated from Bucknell University in 1862. He immediately recruited a company of which he became captain (Company C, 131st Pennsylvania Volunteers). He was accountant in the U. S. Treasury from 1865-1872. He graduated from the Law Department, Columbia University, in 1868. He was cashier of the National Savings bank from 1872-1874. From 1884-1892 he was manager of the New York branch of the American Baptist Publication Society. From 1892-1897 he was Vice-President and Executive Officer of the National Safe Deposit Savings and Trust Company, Washington, D. C. (this company has a capital of one million dollars, surplus half a million, and six millions in deposits). Mr. Jones has been President of the company since 1897.

Song of 1908

Daisies we plucked—wild daisies, fair and sweet—
Placed them upon us, close against the breast,
And with that simple mark went forth to meet
And conquer all, to win at last our quest.

Four years are gone; we've pulled the daisies bare,
For with each new desire a petal fell;
We asked of them, then had to do and dare,
Since, of themselves, the "daisies never tell."

Full well they've told for us our new desires,
And by their presence urged us without rest;
For true desires are in our hearts as fires
That burn and burn us on unto our best.

One aim I love, and two I love, and three—
Thus was each tender petal slowly shed;
Strive, earn and win—be then what thou wouldst be;
Look up and lift—that's what the daisy said.

All spent, the little flower that marked us one,
And we must part, yet feel a stronger bond
In noble deeds, ne'er spent, while brave we run
A larger course, ne'er fearing the beyond.

Senior History

OUR years ago, with elastic step, the Class of 1908 began its remarkable career at Bucknell. Some who started with us have fallen by the wayside, and, alas! the Juniors have devoured them; but still they are as lean as were the seven cattle which (in Pharaoh's dream) devoured the seven fat ones. What a career we had as Juniors! How scornfully we looked upon the miserable underclassmen and set them an example worthy of emulation, application, and dignity!

Our career as Seniors is even more brilliant and more remarkable. The glory that attended us during our Junior year did not now desert us, but increased and enlarged with our dignity and mental advancement. We continue to lead: others follow admirably.

It is with an inexpressible feeling of sorrow that we realize that we are Seniors. But it is a source of great pleasure to know that we have set an example for the classes who follow, well worthy of their imitation, and we would exhort, in the immortal words, to "Despise wealth and imitate a god." We know there are "some" who will make sport of this advice; but in a few years they will fully realize what it means, and only after we are gone will they awaken to their loss.

There is no doubt that we have benefited Bucknell during our career as students. This fact is first and best of all realized by the faculty. That some of the students have not yet grasped this truth is not surprising to us. However, friends of the University who are well acquainted with our class can say, with all due modesty, that our class is indeed a wonderful class. A complete history of our class would fill volumes, but suffice it to say that 1908 is one of the names that was not born to die.

Judging from the past, a brilliant future lies before 1908—paths strewn with flowers, leading through the verdant groves in which fountains flow with limpid waters and are peopled with the nymphs. So, as a little band of travelers whose paths have been together for a short period, we—one and all—with a feeling of sadness bid farewell to our Alma Mater.

(To the Underclassmen and Juniors):

Hearken, then, let this suffice,
And from the Seniors take advice:
Won't you try—'tis not too late—
To be like the Class of 1908?

Class Poem—1909

The days are past when, bold and fine,
In hues Maroon and White,
We sought to make our glory shine
By blazoning abroad at night
Our Nineteen Nine.

And gone the days that could excite
These hearts of "Nineteen Nine"
To hazing rough and wild class fight
Thus high to lift our brave ensign—
Maroon and White.

Full here the days when, firm in line,
Our own Maroon and White,
We fain on cheek and brow combine,
And thus afar the honor write
Of Nineteen Nine.

For so we ever would unite
In bonds of Nineteen Nine,
Unspotted brows and the glow of right,
And thus within ourselves enshrine
Maroon and White.

History of the Naught-Nineites

AFTER the harvests were gathered, the Naught-Nineites crossed the Susquehanna and took possession of the land. The second day they assembled and made "Mac" their chief. He was crafty and cunning, and caused all enemies to tremble with fear.

Now there was a barbarous people, the Naught-Eightites, living in the land which bordered on the Susquehanna, who looked upon the new people with sore displeasure. Lo ! soon after their arrival, the Naught-Nineites saw the hosts of the enemy arrayed in battle line before West College. The Naught-Nineites had just come from the Temple, where they had met for worship. They, however, were not dismayed, but buckling on their armor went against the enemy, and fought so well that they could not withstand them and soon lay strewn upon the ground.

Then the Naught-Eightites, thinking they could sorely perplex the Naught-Nineites, wrote various stories concerning themselves and their enemies upon parchments and sent them out among the people. Then the Naught-Nineites likewise wrote parchments, which told the truth concerning themselves and their enemies and thus caused the foe to be afraid and remain peaceful.

The second day after the New Moon of the New Year was set apart for a feast-day. The evening before the appointed day the Naught-Eightites stole into the city and carried away, as prisoners, some of the Naught-Nineites' public speakers and warriors. The Naught-Nineites held council and decided to smite the enemy from the face of the earth. Suddenly the gates were opened and they rushed upon the enemy, many of whom were bound with chains and cast into prison. Then the Naught-Nineites went to Williamsport to hold their feast and rejoice over their victory. The fair members of the tribe also took part in the feast. While they were eating, a messenger came, saying, "The enemy, the Naught-Eightites, are about to come to the city to feast." The Naught-Nineites very soon were prepared to meet them, but when they came, they called loudly for protection upon the ruler of the city, who had them escorted by armed men to a place of safety.

After the next harvests were gathered, a strange people, the Tenites, appeared on the far bank of the Susquehanna and begged that they might cross over. They had come seeking a land where they might learn the ways of a great people. The Naught-Nineites permitted them to cross, but caused them to come as bondmen. Laws concerning them were made and were posted at public places, and these were read by the Greenbuttonites with fear and trembling. They heeded the laws, and in time wore the dress and assumed the manners of a highly civilized people.

When the time for the second feast came, the Naught-Nineites were ruling their land in such a powerful way that there was no fear of any enemy, so they decided to feast at the Baker House, in the heart of their own town. This was the crowning event of the second year of their rule. The fair members of the tribe set apart an evening for feast and frolic in the "Old Gym" for the fair members of the "New-comers," the Tenites—the rest of the tribes were excluded; however, fun and frolic were not lacking. These are privileges that have been enjoyed by no other tribe.

With the return from the last harvests, the Naught-Nineites laid aside their warfare and became the counsellors of a new tribe, the Elevenites; for now they have become chiefs, content to remain quietly at home around their camp-fires, talking over ancient warfare and past glories, and occasionally meeting together to consult upon the publication of documents filled with profound learning. People from far distant lands will come to learn of their great wisdom, and thus a powerful nation will be founded in the land of the Naught-Nineites beyond the Susquehanna.

HENRY SNARE AFRICA, - - - Huntingdon, Pa.

Strange to say, this youth is a blonde. Why the name became attached to the family would be hard to tell—certainly it was not from duskiness of skin. Africa is a poet whose muse runs to the "sweet concord of sounds," as he is a skillful performer on the piano. His one fault is his uncontrollable boisterousness, for he will persist in scrapping and raising rough-house.

CARLOS ANTONIO ALVAREZ, - Quito, Ecuador, S. A.

This member of 1909, a scion of Spanish nobility, hails from Ecuador. Carlos is very methodical; his rising, dining and retiring rules being "precisely so," and "exactly so." He is quiet, unassuming, and very studious. Nothing breaks the even tenor of his college work except occasional trips to Reading, Pa. How about it, Carlos?

GEORGE FOSTER BAILETS, - - - Sunbury, Pa.

Bailets is not especially remarkable for the amount of noise he makes. He seems to believe that virtue consists in actions rather than in words, and in pursuance of this philosophy he goes quietly about his daily duties. When called upon to recite he generally knows the right thing to say. In that regard he is able to put many of us to shame.

WILLIAM SAMUEL BALDWIN, - Jenningsville, Pa.

Once Rameses said to his wife, "Let us send Will to college." After a few vain protests from his wife regarding some prize-beauty show which she seemed to have in mind, "Ram" sent young Willie down. Unlike the landing of the Pilgrims, Bill was not very lonely, for the co-eds simply elbowed each other right and left to get a look at him. But on the principle that "opposites attract," he soon won the hearts of Lewisburg's fairest. As an athlete and football coach, William occupies no mean position, and more than once he has scared men into first place on the Varsity. During his stay with us he has taken four prizes - one in Christian Evidences, one in Logic, another in Sociology, and still another in Spanish. But with all his success we must admit he behaves with great composure. We prophesy a successful future for William, as he has that stick-to-it-iveness which characterizes all famous men.

KATHARINE BECKLEY, - - - Lewisburg, Pa.

Miss Beckley stands at the head of our class—
Alphabetically.
She always sits in psychology—
Fearfully.
She announces the "universal cut"—
Joyfully.
And afterwards writes another thesis—
Ruefully.

HARRY BLAIR, - - - Mifflinburg, Pa.

When Harry came to Bucknell his name did not strike the boys as being either complete or appropriate, so they promptly affixed to it the sobriquet "Devil." Harry is specializing in "Snits," and his only fear is that he will exhaust all the courses in that line ere the close of his Senior year, and in that event will have to do some real work before he can graduate. In spite of his devotion to his studies, "Devil" has found time to represent 1909 in the national sport, and the fact that he wears his numerals shows that he did it well.

AMY VANESSA BOLLINGER, - Reynoldsville, Pa.

Amy, lucky girl! won the reputation for being a "perfect lady" shortly after her entrance to Bucknell. Since that time the "perfect" has been underscored many times. If "Prexy" knew her as the "Sem" knows her, he would gladly excuse her from Ethics in order that she might spend her spare time in coaching her sisters to put their knowledge to use.

THOMAS STEWART BRACKEN, - Derry, Pa.

This gentleman is a firm advocate of co-education, and as a result he is one of the most frequent guests of the Sem. Indeed, so winning is his way that a few of the younger Semites, believing that they could learn more algebra under him than any of the more ancient pedagogues of that institution, petitioned "Tommy" to ask him to be their instructor. Tommy assented and so did "Tom," and he has now become so popular there that he was chosen to formulate a new system of "tipping" which he pronounces a howling success. Mr. Bracken demonstrates his system from seven to eight on the evening of basketball games, and says that it is the cheapest and most serviceable method that can be employed.

MINNIE ELIZABETH BROBST, - Sunbury, Pa.

Minnie knows she is the youngest—and we know she is the busiest girl in the Junior Class. She devotes a definite amount of time each day to her studies. During her leisure moments we find her teaching in the Sunbury High School. Then, too, she takes a lively interest in the class elections; also occasionally runs opposition to Payne, with her midnight free lunches. Indeed, with this active maiden flitting about, South Hall needs no neatly printed mottoes such as "Never put off for to-morrow what you can do to-day."

JOHN WARD BROWN, - - - Tunnelton, W. Va.

"Never unprepared" seems to be John Ward's motto. You may take him when you will, he is always ready with an answer. When he dons the broadcloth he will doubtless continue to follow out this principle, and thereby assure success for himself in his chosen profession.

ALFRED LEE CAREY - - - Glen Loch, Pa.

Alfred, the speedless wonder, is the Matthewson of our class. His reputation as a twirler of the "Spalding Rocket" preceded him to Bucknell, but on his arrival here he discovered that the team was using the "Spalding Special," a sphere of which he has never been able to gain complete mastery. Outside of that Carey is all right. He is a man of few words, but he always says something when he does talk. He is a hard, conscientious worker in everything which pertains to the welfare of 1909.

ANNA ROBERTA CAREY, - - - Glen Loch, Pa.

That Anna was the most strenuous member of our class, we realized early in our Freshman year. Then it was that while trying to locate Napoleon on the plains of Marengo, she placed him on the bridge of her nose. From that time on she studied zealously and now has exhausted all the courses which the University offers. Anna's knowledge comprises a little bit of everything, all of which she is willing to contribute to any needy person, and when knowledge fails her, she can put up a bluff so like the real thing that no one can detect the difference.

ANNE FRANCES CHAFFEE, - - - Towanda, Pa.

Frank is a mixture of frolic and fun. She is always to be found where there is anything doing, but one of her virtues is that she knows when to stop—that is, after one or two squelches. That she is fitting herself well for her life-work is shown by the gracious and dignified manner in which she presides over her table three times a day.

MYRA MAGARGEE CHAFFEE, - - - Towanda, Pa.

"A full, rich nature, free to trust—
Truthful, and almost sternly just;
Thoughtful, earnest, prompt to act,
And make her generous thought a fact."

ANSLEY BAILEY CLAYPOOLE, - - - Saltsburg, Pa.

A Henry Ward Beecher in embryo; a Napoleon of finance, and a student with plugging abilities. Claypoole is well known on Bucknell's Wall Street, as he has been associated in the second-hand furniture business; advance agent for the Not Like These Pennant Co.; watch-dog of the class revenues, and Business Manager of the L'Agenda. In all of these he has been weighed and found there with the goods.

HELEN DITTING CLIBER, - Hollidaysburg, Pa.

Here's to the girl with the smiling face,
And the girl with the winning air;
Here's to the girl with the stately grace,
And the girl with happiness rare.
Here's to the girl who is slender and tall,
And the girl of charming make;
And here's to the girl who beats them all—
The girl who can cook and bake!

M. ETHEL COCKBURN, - - - Newberry, Pa.

The philosophy of this maiden with the sunny disposition, cheery words, and contented moments may be found briefly given in the following lines:

Don't gather trouble as you're led
Along life's rugged way;
Close by the pathway you must tread
Blooms heartsease, bright and gay.

EDITH ABBOT CORLIES, - - - Philadelphia, Pa.

How do you suppose Edith ever sat still long enough to have this picture taken? Usually she is seen running frantically about "drumming trade" for her missionary meeting. She always goes out into the highway to gather the multitude in. She can talk foreign missions and practice home missions all in the same day. Edith, we congratulate you on your ability in this field.

BELLE EMILY CRAIG, - - Philadelphia, Pa.

Belle has a wonderful capacity for doing two or three things at once. She can take in a deep psychological discussion and at the same time appreciate one or more of the numerous jokes that may pass her way. As the funny side of things always appeals to her, she goes through life with a smile. Her happy-go-lucky disposition, backed by a strong will and large excess of gray matter, leads us to believe that Belle will make her mark in the world.

HAZEL MIRIAM CRAIG, - - Philadelphia, Pa.

Hazel has told us that after she completes her course of study at Bucknell she will go to Paris for French and music. We believed this during her first college days, but since then other interests besides languages and the college glee club have claimed her attention. Hazel—fortunately or unfortunately, who shall say?—has followed in the footsteps of many of her predecessors down the long path to co-education. If anyone is fitted for Law—she is.

JOSEPH EARLE EDWARDS, - Wilmington, Del.

A direct descendant of Jonathan Edwards, and possessed of all the characteristics of that noted preacher. Believing that the body rests too heavily on the soul, Joseph joined the Fletcherites, but was rescued from an early grave by Gretz's proclamation of eradication which dispersed the dieters of grape-nuts from the walls of our Alma Mater. In his diary may be found this statement: "This day have I purchased a trot in Anabasis and have elected Sociology. Heaven be merciful unto me, a sinner!"

CHARLES ELSON, - - - - Kane, Pa.

Elson came among us quietly and has attended to his own business ever since. He was born in Russia, but his quiet demeanor leads us to believe that he did not leave at the request of the Czar. Elson is a student all through, but his strong point is language. He speaks nearly all of the modern languages fluently, and because of this qualification we think he would make a good boss over a gang of Dagoes.

CLARENCE HESS ENGLE, - - - Mt. Joy, Pa.

Engle came to us at the beginning of the present year. Why he did not decide to cast his lot with us earlier we do not know, but it was undoubtedly for some good reason. We are glad to welcome him now, however, and give him place among the faithful.

MARY EVANS, - - - - Freeland, Pa.

An air of mystery surrounds Mary these days. Something very strange has happened which her friends and apparently she, too, cannot understand. But, ah! we have just now discovered what it all means—her dream-book has played her false. She can dream no longer of spending a quiet and uneventful life at home in Freeland. Fate has transferred her affections from the anthracite coal regions to Pittsburg, especially since "brother Tom's wedding." There, wholly unexpected and undreamed of, a new vision broke upon the horizon of Mary's life. Of course she is happy now and will be happier in a few years in the brilliant social whirl of Pittsburg; but happiest of all will we find her when she says, "I never dreamed my dream-book could deceive me so."

NEWTON CROMWELL FETTER, JR., - Reading, Pa.

Fetter came to us from Doylestown. When he landed he had two intentions: one was to make himself felt; the other, to make himself heard. He has succeeded well in both. In his Sophomore year the Freshmen felt his paddle; and as for hearing him, you can hear him from the fourth floor of West Wing to the basement of the Gymnasium. Someone has said that he has a "base voice," meaning by "base" that he is not careful of the language he uses. But judging from the fact that he sings in the Chapel choir we think this last assertion must be slander, so we won't speak of it further.

HELGE FLORIN, - - - Johnsonburg, Pa.

"Chick," as his name implies, came to us while he was still in swaddling clothes. Out of pity for his infancy and homelessness we took him in and have nurtured and trained him with tender care ever since. He has developed rapidly, and is now a flaxen-haired, blue-eyed lad of twelve years. He is even beginning to cast coquettish glances toward the Sem, and has thereby caused many feminine hearts to flutter violently. We hope, however, to carry him with us safely through his Senior year and then send him back to the town of his birth as a living example of what good associations and proper training will do for a child if taken at the proper age.

ALICE ETHEL FOUST, - - - Milton, Pa.

We do not know whether Alice is a descendant of the famous Doctor or not, but she does display one or two of his traits. Like him she is an eager student, and like him she is reserved and reticent toward all but a favored few. To those few, however, she proves herself a faithful and sympathetic friend.

CLOYD ALEXANDER FREDERICK, - Mifflinburg, Pa.

If you ask "Freddie" where he lives, he will say, "The garden spot of the world." If you try to dispute the point with him he will call in Sanders to back up his statement, and if you still refuse to believe it, he will bring "Devil" Blair to the rescue. Against this combination you have no hope of winning out, so the only thing left to do is to beat a hasty retreat and leave them in possession of the field.

WALTER SYLVANUS FRICK, - Lewisburg, Pa.

Frickie, the man with the vagrant heart,
Has finally settled himself to one art;
A brand-new auto accounts for his action,
And his little chaffeur (Schaffer) is the sole attraction.

CHARLES CARPENTER FRIES, - Reading, Pa.

Raised on Reading sauer-kraut and pretzels, nature expected much of him, and she has not been disappointed. Here we have a fencer, a student, an orator, and a coach on cross-country running through Latin fields, all in "Freezie,"—rare qualities, seldom found in one person.

FRANK HERMAN FRITZ, - - Bloomsburg, Pa.

"Heine" is the Caruso of our class, and at almost any hour of the day or night his melodious voice may be heard echoing through the halls of West College. Like all tenors he is fat and good-natured—qualities which in his case do not depend upon his voice, but rather upon his favorite diet of Moxie and "hot doggies." Although very popular with the gentler sex, he was, until a year ago, the least susceptible man we knew; but, alas! one day while he was strolling down the long path, Cupid took a snapshot at him from behind one of the big oak trees, and the arrow struck him just under the fifth rib. Since then it has been all up with Herman.

NORMAN BUCKLAND GARDNER, - Johnstown, Pa.

Gardner made a reputation for himself as a scrapper, early in his college career. Not that he was of a quarrelsome disposition, for he was quite the opposite; but put him in a class fight and he could give an excellent account of himself. Now, since he has no more battles to win for his class, he has turned his attention to science, and in the future will battle with the electrical forces. If he goes at these with his customary vim, we can safely predict success for him.

FRANK KEMP GIBSON, - - Minersville, Pa.

Here is a young man called Gibson—
A product of Factoryville.

In the college quartette,
He gets there, you bet—
With a voice like a nightingale's trill.

When Gibson was only a Freshman.
He was really a sad-looking sight,

But now that she's here,
It's not very queer
That Gibson is looking just (W)right

JOHN WILLIAM GRANFIELD, - Clarksboro, N. J.

"Granny" is what he is called by those who know him best; not because he is like a grandmother, but because that is the best nickname to be derived from his cognomen. He entered college from South Jersey Institute. It was probably the excellent "Jersey sweets" he ate there that gave him his physical development, enabling him to become one of the bulwarks of the 1909 football team.

JAMES ANDREW GROFF, - - Lewisburg, Pa.

"Jim" certainly showed the wisdom of his fathers when he decided to leave the ranks of 1908 and become a member of our class. He is an idealist with remarkable theories as to what a college ought to be, and if perchance he should in future years be given an opportunity to work out his ideas, Bucknell students will enjoy the broadest take-it-easy and go-as-you-please system of education ever invented by mortal man. If you have never discussed the "ideal college" with Jim, you had better drop in some time and talk it over with him. Prexy's Ethics cannot hold a candle to it.

EARL GUILFORD GUYER, - Williamsport, Pa.

When Earl came to college, we could hear on all sides the questions, "Who is he?" and "What is he going to be?" The fellows looked at him admiringly; the Profs were more than ordinarily interested; the Semites nudged each other significantly as he approached, and turned to gaze after him when he had passed. His bearing was manly; yea, even noble. When he spoke, words of marvelous wisdom fell from his lips. Not in many years had such an one appeared in our midst.

Three years have passed since that time, and Earl is still with us. To you who know him we need not say how we were deceived. And to you, gentle reader, who know him not, we have not the heart to destroy the beautiful picture we have drawn.

MATTHEW EMERSON HAGGERTY, - - Nauvoo, Pa.

"Matt" says he comes from Nauvoo—wherever that is—nobody but himself seems to know. In spite of that fact he aspires to be a lawyer, and, believing, as successful predecessors have believed, that an early start is half the battle, Matt occupies his spare time in pleading cases—not in the law classes, but at the Sem. Matt wishes to recommend the Seminary as a very favorable ground for those who wish to get cases early.

HARRY CAUM HAINES, - - Mt. Ephraim, N. J.

No, "Mike" is not Irish; he is a loyal son and supporter of the State of New Jersey. His affections are not entirely confined to his own State, however, but are broad enough to extend even to the Middle West. Mike says that the East can produce the men, but when it comes to the girls you must go a little toward the Pacific to obtain the best qualities. Now you may not agree with him in this statement, but there is on use arguing it—you cannot convince him to the contrary.

EUNICE VIRGINIA HALL, - - Chinchilla, Pa.

Here comes Eunice Virginia Hall:
Her name is long, tho' she's quite small.
Each year, for her, is a round of joy,
And A. B. means nothing if not a boy.

MILFORD SCOTT HALLMAN, - - Mapleshade, Pa.

Different men have different methods of expressing their genius. Some are gifted with silvery tongues; others have ready pens; while still others give vent to their inmost thoughts by the use of the artist's brush.

No more can we say of our class artist than this:
"Judge him by his works."

JOSEPHINE ADELAIDE HANKINS, - Uniontown, Pa.

Ever since Joe opened her eyes upon this world of sin and sorrow she has concluded to take life as a joke and greet everyone with a smile. The fact of her coming to Bucknell via Uniontown High School gave Joe a good start, and her interest and talent in amateur theatricals have made her a "Dramatic Club Star." When the D. D.'s are handed out by the Yale faculty to the class of 1909, we have no doubt that Joe will make a model minister's wife, and that she will relinquish society life at Bucknell for a front seat in church. She will personally superintend all the Children's Day and Christmas-tree exercises.

CLARA ELEANOR HARMAN, - Montoursville, Pa.

Ein kleines Mädchen
With dark-brown hair;
Day after day
Sie lernt noch mehr
Of goodness and mischief, in equal part,
Hidden away in her inmost heart.

If friends around
Sind in dem schmerz,
In sweetest way
Von ihrem Herz;
By shining like a sunbeam bright,
She proves each burden to be light.

KATHERINE ELIZABETH HEINEN, - Milton, Pa.

With the air of one born to be busy, this little maid hurries down from Milton each morning just in time to be five minutes late for Prexy's class. Since her Freshman year "Kate" doesn't deign to notice Bucknell men. Instead she takes in all the State house-parties and saves her sweet smiles and brilliant wit for State men.

JOHN AMMON HESS, - - - - Winfield, Pa.

Hess has never consented to make a permanent residence with us on "the hill," but prefers to go back and forth to college each day from his native town. By so doing he has kept from us that intimate acquaintance which would enable us to discover his inner social qualities. But judging him from outward signs, we have found Ammon to be a congenial classmate, an earnest student, and in every way a credit to his Alma Mater.

CHARLES EDGAR HILBISH, - Northumberland, Pa.

Hilbish comes from Northumberland. When he first appeared at Bucknell as an Academy student, great things were predicted of him. He has fulfilled beyond all expectations these prophecies along both social and mental lines. His chief characteristics are a broad smile that will not wear off and a pair of brown shoes that will not wear out. During three years of his course, Hilbish has appeared regularly with these two things. We sincerely hope he will continue to wear them during the remainder of his college career.

CHARLOTTE HULLEY, - - - Lewisburg, Pa.

This member of a distinguished race keeps up the reputation of the family. Housekeeping, fudge-making and date-making are among the least of her achievements. Her conversational ability is wonderful, especially in points where French is concerned. In matters of chemistry she becomes a patient listener. Often she is heard singing "Fair Harvard" as she flits busily around.

WILLIAM CURRIE HULLEY, JR., - Lewisburg, Pa.

Mother calls me "William"
Father calls me "Will,"
Sister calls me "Willie,"
But the boys, they call me "Bill."

DONCASTER GEORGE HUMM, - Punxsutawney, Pa.

Humm became prominent in college affairs early in his Freshman year when he made his sensational escape from the hands of the "Sophs," appeared at the Freshman campfire, and sent his fellow-classmates scurrying pell-mell on a barnstorming expedition into the wilds of Smoketown. "Don" reminds you of the hero in a modern melodrama, who is always doing something startling, thus keeping himself in the limelight most of the time. He is a firm believer in physical and mental culture, and in order to maintain a high standard of both, he makes it a rule to walk from the hill to the Court House each morning, and on his way back to study the social side of Ethics.

WILMER C. JOHNSON, - - - Downingtown, Pa.

While "Johnnie" does not pose as an athlete, he holds the enviable record of being the highest jumper in Bucknell. His record is something like thirty feet, done with his hands tied back. This remarkable feat you will not find recorded in the athletic records of Bucknell, but if you will look carefully under one of the windows in East Wing, you will find his footprints in the sod. They mark the spot where Johnnie landed after his flying leap from the third-story window as he made his escape from the hands of his Sophomore captors.

HAROLD LEE HUNTER, - - - Oil City, Pa.

One of the most mischievous kids that ever entered Bucknell. Give him some work to do and he is indisposed; prompt him to some devilment and he is in seventh heaven. His favorite pastime is to sit in his room and, with the aid of a big French horn, toot the "Freshman March" at all passersby. His other occupations are eating and sleeping. This, you will see, divides his day into three parts, and being methodical in his habits, Harold devotes eight hours to each occupation.

LEON ELLISON JONES, - - - Buffalo, N. Y.

Our sole electrician. "Deacon" at college and "Pillar of the Church" at home are the dubs to which this fellow answers. Whether from similarity or contrast he was so nicknamed we do not care to state. Only a moment's reflection on the part of any of his classmates will recall plenty to substantiate either theory. However, if in his engineering life he displays the same constant devotion that has characterized his class activities, the Class of 1909 will still further be proud of her "Deac."

RILEY HARRISON KAUFFMAN, - Shamokin Dam, Pa.

Kauffman is a product of Kutztown Normal, which place, he asserts, is the finest prep school in the State. Doubtless it has done much for him, but somehow it could not, nor can we, cause him to stop pronouncing his v's as w's.

CHARLES WYANT KRAMER, - - - Oil City, Pa.

"Abe" hails from Oil City. He was weaned on crude petroleum, which fact accounts for his strength and husky appearance. He loves his books, and ordinarily nothing can get him away from them—but the Seminary. "Abe" is especially notorious for his singing and story-telling proclivities. He absolutely refuses to sing a song and stick to the tune, or to tell a story that has a point. He is an authority on all questions of mathematics and engineering, but has as yet been unable to figure out the probability of being called on in Prexy's classes.

ONESIMUS GEORGE LANGFORD, - Factoryville, Pa.

Since Langford has become manager of the "Orange and Blue" you can find him going about with a lantern, like old Diogenes. He is not looking for an honest man, however, but for the man who has not paid his subscription to the paper.

Langford is also one of the parsons, and as such inflicts his good offices on the parish of Northumberland whenever the people of that place desire to do penance for an hour by listening to him.

WILLIAM LEISER, III, - - - Lewisburg, Pa.

"Doe," as he is familiarly called, hails from Lewisburg. Because of his beautiful dimple and lustrous eyes, as are shown by the accompanying picture, he has earned a reputation as a ladies' man that would be hard to rival. However, it is not in this respect alone that "Doe" has made a name for himself. He has also accomplished wonders in the scholastic line. His themes on "The Lighter Sports" and "A Rolling Stone" have been given a permanent place in literature. He is also a good student in modern languages. When he leaves school he expects to accept a position as Professor of Spelling in some large university.

MARTHA D. LEOPOLD, - - - Milton, Pa.

"Dol" belongs to the "Milton bunch," and is therefore one of the hustlers. With the bright new trade-mark of the Milton High School stamped upon her jovial countenance, she brought her linguistic ability to Bucknell. We all realize how her lively recitations save the reputation of the Psychological class, and without her Prof. Riemer's German class would fall flat.

CHARLES JOHN LEPPARD, - - - Duncannon, Pa.

"Lep" hails from Duncannon, but he is nothing like Duncan. He amuses himself in the summer time by knocking down nickels on the Philadelphia trolley lines, in order that he may attend college in the winter. He bears with graceful dignity the presidency of the Junior Class, an honor which we conferred upon him as an appreciation of the sterling qualities which make him one of the strongest men of our number.

CHARLES OSNER LONG, - - - Sunbury, Pa.

Here is one of our noted engineers of the future. He has surveyed everything with which he has come in contact, from the confines of his room to many miles of country round about. We predict that his ability to discover snits and the shortest and easiest paths out of difficulties will be of great assistance to him when he has to face complicated problems of engineering.

GILBERT HARDING LYTE, - - - Millersville, Pa.

Phi Kappa Sigma

Twinkle, twinkle, little Lyte,
Out a-shining every night;
How we wonder where you are
From your books and work so far,
That you come in, morn the last,
Late and sleepy to our class.

CHARLES RICHARD MALLERY, - - - Juniata, Pa.

When 1900 hands "Charlie" over to the world she gives the nearest thing to Blackstone she possesses—a three-decker brain that smiles at abstraction; a nature that revels in unwinding the most intricate problems. Psychology and philosophy are to him mere after-dinner topics. From these circumstances we conclude that any setting short of a Supreme bench would be the vilest incongruity.

JOHN HENRY MATHIAS, - - Philadelphia, Pa.

The movements of John Mathias are as dark and mysterious as the unexplored regions of Africa. One day he is clad in football togs as he leads the team to victory; the next he is seen on the path to the "Sem" gallantly assisting some fair maiden with the voluminous French text; again he is found in his room deeply absorbed in writing a letter which will probably be addressed to Factoryville or Philadelphia. When mailing a letter he is known to have consumed three quarters of an hour in counting the change from a nickel which he has given for a postage stamp.

John has spread the report that he expects to assume the broadcloth and enter the pulpit, but further investigation has revealed the fact that if he does not secure an appointment from Roosevelt as assistant mail clerk at Lewisburg, he will become manager of Keith's Vaudeville.

EDNA LILLIAN MEACHAM, - - Montandon, Pa.

This "Study in Brown," who "does not sit still long enough to grow weary," started her Freshman work by taking two courses in Latin during the same term. Then her restless feet led her into Mathematical pathways. Not content with these, she must needs fit herself to give a brilliant translation of Goethe's Faust. Ah, no! "snits" is not included in this maiden's vocabulary.

HANNAH BEMIS MERVINE, - - Milton, Pa.

Hannah is one of our most promising candidates for a post graduate in domestic science. Really, in view of the apparent possibilities, it is not quite evident why she continues to take higher Latin and even contemplates taking the teacher's course, also.

MARY MATILDA MEYER, - - - - Rebersburg, Pa.

Miss Meyer, or Mary Matilda, as she prefers to be called, is one of the shining lights of "Our Valley." At one time she intended to make "Our Valley" famous by writing a book. Then she thought "Our Valley" needed another physician. After a visit to "Our Valley" she decided to be a medical missionary, and now, after testing "Our Valley's" pies and cakes, she has started a collection of their recipes. Her favorite is a birthday cake for February 12th—Abe's birthday—Abraham Lincoln's, of course whose else?

DAVID WALTER MOORE, - - - - Milton, Pa

Walter first derived his love for chemistry in the laboratory of a bake-shop at Milton. What he saw there of the wonderful combination of elements which makes our daily bread caused him to desire a little more of the science, so he came to Bucknell. When he enters the baking profession again you may expect to hear of some new products in the pastry line, such as yeastless bread, flourless cake, etc. practical results of his knowledge of chemistry.

GERTRUDE ADELLA MYERS, - - Williamsport, Pa.

From the crown of her head to the tip of her toe,
She is neatness incarnate, a modern Juno;
She presides o'er the Smithy as well as the ball.
And culture absorbs in the lecture hall.

CHARLES AUGUSTUS NYBERG, - - - New York City

Charlie, the Bowery Boy; he wears his hat on the back of his head, expectorates through his teeth, smokes cigarettes a pack at a time, and makes goo-goo eyes at the "goils"—all of which habits he acquired during his early training on the streets of New York. He says that he is an intimate friend of Rockefeller, the Vanderbilts, and other notables of the metropolis. It may be true, Charles, but you will have to show us.

CHARLES O'BRIEN, - - - - Nanticoke, Pa.

Our class boasts of three men from Nanticoke, but when you speak of "the bad man from Nanticoke," everybody knows you mean O'Brien. He gained this reputation during his Sophomore year, when he made a specialty of eating Freshmen. A glance into his smiling countenance would never lead you to suspect that behind those sunshiny features dwelt the qualities which made him so dreaded by the knights of the green button. "Pat" is also the athlete of the class, and is at present captain of the Varsity football and basketball teams. His favorite expression is, "You can't keep Nanticoke down."

ALBERT WAFFLE OWENS, - - - Lewisburg, Pa.

"'Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all." Yet it is not his to despair, for according to statistics the percentage of pretty Freshman girls increases every year.

GUY PAYNE, - - - - - Titusville, Pa.

You're late at morning, noon, and night—
For excuse you have nothing to say;
So take our advice, and hurry a mite,
Lest you're late on the Judgment Day.

ROY HILL PHILSON, - - - - - Eerlin, Pa.

"Phil" is certainly one of the boys -
When waking or sleeping he's making a noise;
He whoops and he hollers, he dances and sings;
He's brimful of nonsense and all sorts of things.
He never is quiet, nor will be till dead
From the soles of his feet to the top of his head.

ALBERT THEODORE POFFENBERGER, - Sunbury, Pa.

"Poffie" always writes "Jr." after his name so that you will know he is a member of 1909, and not mistake him for a Freshman. He is a fellow with a genial disposition and a manner which wins friends for him wherever he goes. He is somewhat of a bachelor in his habits, yet enough interested in the fair sex to occupy a front room, where he can watch the co-eds as they pass. This fact leads us to believe that he will not always be content to gaze from a distance, but some day will set out to win the one he has selected from the number who pass in daily review beneath his window.

WILLIAM HARRY POSTEN, - - - Navesink, N. J.

"Shorty" belongs to that class of students who are known as 'reformed ministerials.' This term does not mean that he will be a minister of the Reformed Church, but rather that he has departed from his original intentions and decided upon a profession other than the ministry. We think that he has acted wisely and well, for if he had persisted in his former idea he would have deprived Satan of a model imp. Harry is never quite so happy as when he is tormenting some poor individual and making life miserable for him. Verily, verily, Old Nick will yet come into possession of his own!

ALLAN GERALD RITTER, - South Williamsport, Pa.

His gentlemanly manners have made him a favorite among the boys, and his dark eyes a winner with the girls. He is a man who mixes study with society in such proportion as to derive the best results from both. The Semites say "His smile is a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

STANLEY HERBERT ROLFE, - - - Nanticoke, Pa.

The subject of the accompanying sketch is a direct descendant of John Rolfe and Pocahontas. Consequently, he is what is ordinarily termed "a good Indian." He is not a "Strongheart," however, for his affections flit about butterfly like, sipping a little nectar here and there, but ever moving on to some fairer flower. He says that when he graduates from Bucknell he will study law. After that he will doubtless open an office in his home town, where he will deal out injustice to all who are unfortunate enough to come before him.

EVAN DELAPLANE ROSER, - Woodsboro, Md.

Formerly one of Gretz's indispensables, but now engaged in writing a work on frenzied finance among students. Senior member of the firm of Roser Brothers, consulting engineers; also proprietor of East Wing Business College, an institution for the purpose of teaching college men how to spend money recklessly and still send home presentable expense accounts to "the governor."

CHARLES STILLWELL ROUSH, - Lewisburg, Pa.

In Roush you will find all the qualities necessary to success in the life-work he has chosen, that of the ministry. He has a pleasing personality, the gift of oratory, ambition to succeed, and a clear-cut, straightforward character. Truly, we think he has chosen aright.

KLEINE HARLAN ROYER, - - Rebersburg, Pa.

This is Zeke's brother, and like Zeke, he is one of the sages of Rebersburg. His philosophy is that life is so short that we should not hurry through it; consequently you will always find Kleine taking things calmly and leisurely. The happy smile with which he greets you is simply the outcropping of his genial disposition.

PAUL JASPER SANDERS, - - - Vicksburg, Pa.

Sanders is named after his famous ancestor, Paul Kruger, and like Oom Paul, he is an advocate of the simple life. He has gone in and out quietly among us during the past three years, and during that time we have known only one thing to disturb his equanimity: that was when he received a bid to the Senior Sem reception. It came near being the death of Paul.

LEONORA MAE SHAMP, - - - Lewisburg, Pa.

Once a maiden, sweetly 'guiling all the sad souls into smiling,
Sat beside the laden table, close beside the arched door;
Then, methought, the air grew denser, perfumed from the Shamp-Payne censer
Which the rare and radiant maiden, whom the angels name
Lenore,
Brought before her fellow-classmen, our gay little maid,
Lenore—
Shamp-Payne, then, but nevermore.

IDA MABEL SLOUT, - - - Newberry, Pa.

Mabel is a maiden impulsive, gay, and fickle oft, yet ambitious, true, and very kind withal.

HARRY SMITH, - - - - Nanticoke, Pa.

When this member of 1909 struck the "burg," his name was just plain Harry Smith, but as we had to distinguish him in some way from the Smiths already here we dubbed him "Nanticoke." Harry has strong opinions of his own, and one of them is that he can run this institution better than "Prexy" can. For instance, last term the president notified Harry that he would have to make up a term of chemistry. Harry tried to squirm out of the difficulty by telling "Prexy" that he intended to take up foreign missionary work, and consequently he would not need the science. Thereupon "Prexy" insisted that he take it anyhow, saying, "You will need it in after-life, and even if you should die soon it would possibly come in handy."

HARRY LEE SMITH, - - - - Lewisburg, Pa.

"Now here's a fine youngster of excellent pith—
Fate tried to conceal him by naming him Smith;"
But studies to him are as hive is to bee,
So success must attend him in highest degree.

Of course, nothing startling as yet we recall;
But wait till the year Naughty-nine, in the fall,
And see if the premium which Silence awards
Isn't thrust upon him as her own Lord of Lords.

STANTON REINHART SMITH, - Stroudsburg, Pa.

A student who has taken no Latin, and less Greek. One of Riemer's stars in Dutch. The only man in the class who was arrested at the Freshman banquet and still retained enough nerve not to drop out of college. Regardless of his crimes, "Van-Smith" is a friend worth going miles to get. His co-ed attachments have been few, but strong.

IRVIN ALLEN TIMLIN, - - - - - Clarion, Pa.

Behold the politician of our class! When "Tim" goes electioneering it is simply impossible to resist him. His keen insight into political situations; his logic and power of argumentation, combined with his magnetic personality and marvelous oratorical abilities, make "Timmie" an opponent to be feared and avoided in all points at issue. He is President of the Anti-Graft Society, Secretary of the Investigation Committee, and an honorary member of the Civic Club.

MANLEY TOLBERT, - - - - - Athens, Pa.

"Tab" hails from Athens, and like the Greeks of old, he is an athlete. To him belongs the honor of leading our famous baseball team to victory in their game with the Freshmen last year. This event alone in "Tab's" life would endear him to us. But that is not all; he is one of our strong men on the Varsity football team, where he has brought renown to his class and to his Alma Mater.

GERTRUDE LILLIAN TURNER, - Philadelphia, Pa.

Lillian is one of those prodigies whose cleverness is the envy of all her fellow-classmates, and whose wit, though sometimes sarcastic, is ever ready to play its part. She is very willing, however, to give up some of her superfluous knowledge, and thereby has often proved that a friend in need is a friend indeed.

MYRTLE HARGRAVE WALKINSHAW, - Greensburg, Pa.

"Walkie" comes with sprightly spring,
Gorgeous in her very best;
While beneath her coat doth cling
A clock that never takes a rest.

"Walkie" eats our candies new
In an open, shameless way;
Treats her "Profs" and classmates, too,
Only getting squelched for pay.

Eating, singing, "Walkie" lives,
There within her corner room;
Ought to see how well she strives,
Now with pen and now with broom.

-Adapted.

SARAH WALTERS, - - - - Lewisburg, Pa.

The "indispensable" to the "Sem," Uncle Sam and the chapel roll.

NALA DAMAYANTI WEBB, - Rutherford, N. J.

She looks as if no thought of ill
In all her life had stirred her;
But while she moves with careful tread,
And while she turns her thoughtless head,
She is planning, planning, planning still,
And naught has e'er deterred her.

AMELIA MARGARET WENZEL, - - - Lewisburg, Pa.

The girl who speaks a dozen tongues,
When all is said and done,
Cannot compare with her who can
And does keep still in one "

A quiet, reserved little lady is Amelia, with a fund of humor, kindly good-nature, and sympathy that you never would guess if you did not know her well. Yet all who have ever been in classes with her know that she is always on time, is faithful and conscientious, and an all-round good student.

EUGENE VANWHY, - - - - Stroudsburg, Pa.

This fellow is the other one of the VanWhy-Smith twins. He comes from Stroudsburg, and spends most of his time discoursing on the beauty of the place. When he speaks of this, do not make the mistake of thinking he refers to the natural scenery, for such is not the case. The beauty to which he refers is a certain young lady in whom he is much interested and whose virtues he loves to extol. He is also a strong exponent of the advantages of married life.

GEORGE NORMAN WILKINSON, - Williamsport, Pa.

If perchance you look out of your window at almost any time of the day, you can see this individual strolling across the campus, with a gun in one hand and a couple of queer-looking biological specimens in the other, making his way toward the Library. Here he proceeds to mount and later place the specimens in the museum. We fear that if he does not change, his ambition may lead him to some far land, where he will furnish a meal for a prowling wild beast or perhaps grace the table of the king of some cannibal isle.

WARREN TYSON WILSON, - - - DuBois, Pa.

"Kid" entered college from the "Prep," where, under the tutelage of learned professors, he laid the foundation for his future learning. Kid is an active member of the Y. M. C. A. and Ministerial Association. Most of his studies have been directed along these lines. He will undoubtedly be a successful kindergarten teacher.

RALPH GEORGE WINEGARDNER, - - Muncy, Pa.

"Although his name begins with 'Wine,' Ralph is a total abstainer, and he fully intends to cheat fate for giving him such a title. 'Winey' is widely known as a football star and a horseman. He says that a mule is built for greater speed than a horse, and to prove his statement rode Horam's white mule a mile in 1 minute 26 seconds amid the cheers of a multitude of spectators assembled on Market Street. But with all this, Ralph is modest and unassuming. He never allows his studies to interfere with his college education.

Class Poem—1910

Softly the breezes
Whisper and sigh,
Tossing the branches,
Fluttering by.

Gently the brooklet
Babbles along,
Softly murm'ring
Its sweet, patient song.

Sweetly the warblers
Sing in the air,
Music gently
Hovering there.

But all the breezes,
Whispering, die.
Murmuring brooklets
Freeze bye and bye.

Warblers' sweet music
Dies on the air;
Silenced their warbling—
Music so rare.

Still quiet masters
Noises so free—
Praises of nature,
Great tho' they be.

Songs yet unsilenced
Sing in my breast,
Not to be vanquished
Like all the rest:

Loyal, glad lays to Nineteen and ten—
Greatest of classes
E'er known to men;

Height of reflection,
Model of mirth;
Fairest, its genius
Seen on the earth;

Star of all classes
E'er at Bucknell,
Whose wond'rous achievements
Freshmen know well:

Loyalty, honor,
Friendship and fun,
Purpose, endeavor—
All, all are one.

United together
'Neath colors so true—
The gold and the black with
The orange and blue.

Then let us, classmates,
Honor, revere
Our own Alma Mater,
Our class that's as dear.

Let us be faithful,
Let us be true
To the greatest of classes
'Neath orange and blue.

Dearly we love it,
We'll part from it ne'er;
The wide world may claim us,
And we'll wander there.

Yet we'll be loyal;
Mem'ries shall stay,
Gently retaining
The dear college day:

Keeping us ever
Members of ten,
Making us always
Students again.

Class History—1910

ELL, sir," said Mr. Dooley, "I see by th' pa-apers that th' class iv nineteen tin iv Bucknill University has had a banquit."

"A what?" cried Mr. Hennessy.

"A banquit," said Mr. Dooley.

"The shameless varmits," said Mr. Hennessy. "Who be they as thinks they deserve to enjoy feastin' an' riochus livin', with toimes so harrud an' iverybody havin' to lay awake nights to kape th' wolf frim a-gnawin' iv th' front stair carpit?"

"Ye don't mane to say," said Mr. Dooley, "that ye niver heard iv this here class? Why, that's th' Sophomore Class iv Bucknill University, an' a foiner class would be harrud to foind. Whin they arrived, th' fall iv 1906, th' whole populace was struck with th' koind way they threatad th' campus, not throwin' th' purty green grass in th' shade at all, as ye moight say. But be that as it may, Mr. Hinnessy, it was a moighty foine crowd iv young people as came to Bucknill at this toime iv which I spake, and whin I am afther tellin' ye a little iv what this same class has accomplished, I think ye will see th' justice iv me statement.

"Even as frishmin they showed themselves a most excillint class, beatin' th' hoigh an' moighty sophomores in th' rush, football and basketball games an' th' loike. Th' sophomores niver got ahead iv thim, not wanct.

"But would ye believe it, Mr. Hinnessy, with all iv their foine qualities, they do say as how th' upper classmin threatad thim somethin' scandalous, a-shavin' iv their poor, definceless heads, an' niver lettin' thim even spake to th' fair ladies at th' Seminary. But they say that's th' way they threat all frishmin, an' howiver much they would have loiked to arrange things more pleasant f'r this class, they couldn't exactly do it. Annyhow, it wasn't annything to their discredit if they was threatened that way.

"An' this year, Mr. Hinnessy, after they had become sophomores, they conducted themselves noble. Why, ye couldn't go annywhere without a-seein' those numbers, 1910, written in black an' yellow f'r thim foolish frishmin to see.

"This year there was a new-fangled rush invinted f'r th' special priservation iv th' tinder frishmin be an ex-champion croquet-player. Th' min fit most valiant, an' even if they was foinally defeated, still ye couldn't hardly expect thim to do so very much with their opponents numberin' two to iv'ry wan iv thim.

"When it come toime to publish th' rules f'r th' new frishmin, th' greatest genius iv th' class was brought to bear upon th' matter, an' th' product iv th' combined effort iv thim all was a proclimation that inclusive iv all th' possible mistakes a deluded frishmin should not make, that niver before nor afterwards was such a worruk iv art concocted.

"Wan iv th' most excitin' ivents iv this narrative, Mr. Hinnessy, was th' postin' iv th' frishmin procs, in infamous imitation iv their betthers. They done their best, but between me an' yerself, Mr. Hinnessy, they ralely wasn't worthy iv a doime museum, much less iv a respectable menagerie. An' besides, they played a most disgustin' thrick on th' unsuspectin', hoigh-minded sophomores, breakin' all th' rules

iv th' game. Ye see they was scared to post their procs in th' avenin', as is proper, but did it in th' broad daylight, while th' sophomores was busy with their worruk. An' whin these same unsuspectin' sophomores issued frim th' halls iv larnin' at 9.15, they was met an' threated most scandalous be those owdacious frishmin. But some iv their number courageously jumped fr'm th' second-story window an' bravely upheld th' honor iv th' class.

"Th' crownin' ivent iv th' season was th' football game between these two contendin' classes. Whativer victories these consated frishmin had won was due to th' superabundance iv their numbers an' not to their own hoigh qualities, an' whin it came to a fair contest with equal numbers, th' sophomores showed their superiority iv'ry toime.

"An' all iv th' toime they was accomplishin' these wonders, they was laborin' unther a task that difficult that it near makes me faint a-thinkin' iv it. All iv this toime, moind ye, they was a-writin' daily themes an' a-usin' iv th' 'daily theme eye,' both iv which, I have heard, is most turrible harrud worruk an' somethin' which would have turned most folks gray."

"Well," said Mr. Hennessy, "as fur as I can see, ye seem to loike this here Bucknill class iv 1910."

"Faith," said Mr. Dooley, "I don't know but I do. An' annyhow, they seem to be purty near th' real thing"

Light, More Light

"More light," the poet Goethe, dying, said,
And through the darkened chamber where he lay
They let the sunlight stream across his bed
To cheer his spirit as it passed away.

And we whose lives are opening like the year—
Not closing like the poet's, long ago—
Still ask more light, to make the future clear,
And guide the way before us as we go :

The light that guides our lives through winding ways,
The light that every age has sought to find,
The light that to the latest of our days
Shines on us from the universal mind.

To seek the light that shines more bright ahead,
And makes us follow on with all our powers,
Till all the shadows from our way have fled,
Must be the purpose of a class like ours.

Our course lies now before us, and the year
Will witness to our failure or success;
The coming years of life its stamp will bear,
And all its earnest effort will confess.

Our way will not be always strewn with flowers,
Some days will not be golden as they pass;
But courage in the need will still be ours,
And that must be the spirit of our class.

We seek the light that we may make it known
With all the powers and talents of our youth;
Not for the present or ourselves alone,
We seek for coming years the light of truth.

And this through all the years must be our guide,
To follow as a guiding star from heaven :
To seek the light that we may shed it wide
Must be the aim of 1911.

To make some lives the better for our life,
That others may be strong because we live,
And in their need gain courage for the strife—
Be strengthened by the help our hands can give.

So if we fail, or if we win the day
By reason's power or genius' dauntless might,
Our class united must go on its way
Till in the future we shall find the light.

Freshman History

THE Class of 1911 began its history-making epoch on the morning of September 21, 1907. It was then that we made our first appearance at chapel, in dress hardly befitting a drawing-room, but well suited to the work we had in hand, for we were going to the "class scrap."

After the exercises were over we marched quietly out of the chapel, and at the door were decorated by friendly Juniors with blotches of red and blue ink, by which signs we should know each other on the field of battle. Then we assembled, gave our yells, and moved toward the scene of the approaching conflict.

As we were advancing toward the athletic field, the forces of the "Sophs" came rushing down the hill armed with lampblack and a strong conviction that they were going to win. The opposing lines took their positions on the field, and at the crack of a pistol began hostilities. A decision was to have been given at the end of twenty-five minutes, but when half that time had expired all that was to be seen of the once mighty "Sophs" was here an agonized, beseeching face, and there a feebly remonstrating foot. The victory was ours. Thus, with a splendid display of nerve and strength, did the Class of 1911 make its entrance into Bucknell.

We continued to keep the upper hand in underclass doings by very effectually demolishing the Sophomore "procs" when they were posted, despite the fact that they were, for the most part, plastered far into the outskirts of the town, so that no interested party would be well able to see them and profit(?) by the advice therein.

The posting of the Freshman "procs" was a decided victory for 1911. While the "Sophs" were sleeping through their lectures on a quiet Monday morning, about a dozen fellows of the Freshman Class did the work. They tacked up in every conspicuous place in the town and on the campus what was generally accepted as the best "proc" that ever went up at old Bucknell. When the astonished "Sophs" awoke they found, on every tree and post, very good "likenesses" of themselves as others see them. This sudden popularity did not seem to please them, however, but their opposition amounted to nothing against the indomitable spirit of 1911. When they voiced their objections too loudly they were quietly bound and laid on the grass to think it over while they gazed upward through the trees.

On the twenty-third of November the Sophomores finally screwed up their courage, and when they had it to the sticking point, succeeded in winning the annual football game. As an expression of loyalty to their class at this time, the Freshman girls presented a beautiful cluster of chrysanthemums to the team. This was only an indication of the unswerving loyalty which has characterized our class-sisters, and which has been a constant source of encouragement and inspiration throughout the year.

The last event worthy of notice in class affairs was the Freshman banquet at Harrisburg, on the evening of January 7, 1908. The Sophomores, having been effectually subdued by former defeats, offered no resistance to our departure, and everything passed off smoothly and happily.

Thus we have met and overcome in turn the successive crises in first-year life at Bucknell. We can justly paint our achievements in brilliant colors and lay claim to our position on the honor-roll of classes. As the record of past events places us in a most enviable position, we are resolved, by loyalty and progress, to make that position even more enviable and to fairly merit the crown our Alma Mater bestows upon her favored sons and daughters.

The Evolution of the Class Memorial

THE idea of class memorials is as old as Bucknell University itself. The first class that graduated from the institution felt just as much love for its Alma Mater and just as much gratitude for the benefits received as any succeeding class; and it is such feelings as these which inspire a class to leave a fitting memorial. Thus the source of inspiration being the same, the variation in the gifts is to be found in the individuality of the classes and in the growth of the school. The expansion of the school depends upon the growth of the classes, and results each year in a memorial commensurate with this growth; therefore at the time of such great prosperity of the university, the evolution of the class memorial is a fit subject, both for the classes which have passed from her halls and for those which have their duties still before them.

It is much to be regretted that there has never been a permanent record kept of the memorials from the beginning, and because of this fact, those which are not definitely marked or otherwise known will be overlooked in this article. The first memorial of which we have any knowledge was given by the Class of 1865. It is a tree situated at the foot of the hill, on the left side of the path leading to West College. At its base is a marble slab bearing the class year. The tree is a black ash, and has grown to be a large and shapely specimen, which will probably live for years.

Several classes following the year 1865 continued the custom started by their predecessor, and a number of trees were planted on the campus. However, not all of them were marked, and cannot be identified unless perhaps by members of the classes which planted them. Some time later the planting of trees was abandoned, and the class memorial assumed another character. Books were presented to the library, and of these early memorials no record seems to exist to-day.

On the left side of the entrance to Main College, a granite block was inserted in the wall by the Class of 1875. It bears the Latin inscription Non Nobis Solum in addition to the class year. Whether any other memorial was given by this class is not known. There was probably nothing else, as the idea of class gifts was then in its embryonic state.

The gift of the Class of 1878, the next one of which there is any record, is especially interesting. It is a large elm tree standing at the foot of the hill near the path leading to Main College, and marked by a stone set at the base of the tree. Last year it seemed as if this memorial would have to be removed, for almost one-half of its trunk had rotted away. But in order that it might be preserved, the hollow was filled with a preparation of cement and the trunk was built up to its normal shape. The work proved to be a success, and now the tree is growing vigorously.

The Class of 1880 departed from either of the precedents when it undertook to decorate Commencement Hall. It frescoed the walls and otherwise greatly improved the appearance of the room. In addition the class placed upon the front of Main College, at the right of the entrance, a metal plate bearing the inscription, Post proelium praeium. This plate forms a conspicuous and lasting memorial of the class, although by no means showing the extent of its generosity.

From the year 1880, the presentation of books to the library again became popular. These were valuable acquisitions to the working material of the school, and although such memorials are perhaps not so visible as others, yet their good effects are even more lasting and cannot be estimated. No class of the future can go amiss in presenting an alcove of useful books to the present well-equipped library. To the year 1899, besides the classes which gave books, some planted trees, while others seem to have left no memorial whatever; and yet no one can tell just what memorials of their college these classes have sent forth into the world in the good reputation, honor and fame of their individual members.

With the Class of 1899 begins an almost unbroken series of memorials, each seeming to vie with its predecessor in value, usefulness and beauty. That year marks the beginning of the real advance in the direction of the beautification of the college property. The Class of 1899 planted vines along the front of Main College and inserted a granite block in the wall, bearing the word "Ivy" and the class year. It was an excellent idea, intended to beautify the long stretch of bare wall, which was broken only by the rows of windows. Although the whole wall has never been overgrown, yet this attempt showed what results might have been attained if other classes would have carried out the idea of 1899.

The Class of 1901 planted a maple tree near the University Avenue entrance to the campus, and marked it by a stone at its foot, bearing the date. This was the last tree memorial. It is likely that this class gave a more substantial memorial in the form of books, but of this there is no record.

In the year 1902 the class took a new method of decorating the campus. On each side of the path leading from the chapel to the hill it erected a granite post several feet high, bearing the date 1902. It was the intention of the class to establish a custom by which the whole campus would be outlined with a series of such markers. But, as in the case of the ivy, these expectations were not realized, and no more posts were added. Besides the posts, the class gave a sum of money for the purchase of books.

The Class of 1903 could not agree upon any memorial with which to adorn the campus, and after much discussion it also decided to purchase books for the library. About this time the classes began to raise the money in part by means of the class play given during Commencement week; and the increasing popularity of these plays made the presentation of finer memorials possible.

The massive brownstone steps in front of the entrance to Main College stand as a useful and ornamental monument of the Class of 1904. This was a great improvement to the campus, and one which would probably still be wanting had it been left for the college to build. Around these steps one of the school traditions has arisen--that it is highly improper for a Freshman to be seen loitering in their vicinity. In fact it is at the price of his hair that a Freshman ventures to sit upon this memorial.

With the Class of 1905 the desire to surpass all preceding memorials is in evidence. This class erected the two huge brownstone pillars at the University Avenue entrance to the campus. They are without doubt among the most imposing adornments of the university property. It is these pillars which give the Freshman his first impression of the campus, and by the end of his four years' course they are to him the most familiar objects about the university.

The Class of 1906 found a difficult task before it when it undertook to choose a memorial, and therefore began early to look about for opportunities. The old wooden foot-bridge which crossed the brook near the chemical laboratory was doomed. It was removed, and in its place was built an arch of brownstone, with a concrete floor.

Rising above the centre of the arch, on each side of the walk, is an artistically cut stone bearing the class numerals. What so short a time before was an "eyesore" now became one of the beauty spots of the campus. As it is constructed entirely of brownstone and concrete, it is a permanent and practically indestructible memorial.

To the Class of 1907 was given the task of presenting a memorial which would be more useful, ornamental and conspicuous than any former one, and its members admirably acquitted themselves of their task. In a tower erected upon the top of West College, rising twenty feet above the roof, they placed a clock. It is a Seth Thomas tower clock with four faces, each being eight feet in diameter. It strikes the hours and the half-hours, and requires winding only once a week. The faces, which are of ground glass, are illuminated at night. Above the four faces the numerals of the class are visible night and day as a constant reminder of the donors. The striking of the clock, on account of its convenience, has become almost indispensable to the student.

From the preceding description it is perceived that the memorials may be of two kinds—those for the practical use of the student and those for the ornamentation of the college property. They are equally desirable and both contribute to the welfare of the university. Although much already has been done, there is still great opportunity for the originality and generosity of the following classes. The library can be further enlarged, and apparatus can be presented to the various departments. Then there are innumerable opportunities for beautifying the surroundings and making them more attractive to the student of the future. Thus we see the spirit of love for the school embodying itself in the various memorials, which in a degree keep pace with the development of the school. With the examples of former classes as an incentive, we have every reason to believe that in the coming years the class memorials will become some of the most useful and valuable acquisitions to the property of the university.

Long Ago

Grandma told me all about it,
Told me so I could not doubt it,
Of the college girls and men—long ago,
Of the life at old Bucknell—
How the students all did well,
For they scorned to crib or "ride,"
And honest study was their pride—long ago.

College days were bright and sunny,
College ways were very funny,
"Up the hill" and "At the Sem"—long ago.
For their manners were so staid,
One might think they were afraid—
I can almost see them now
Quaking at each other's bow—long ago.

Grandma says our college wooing,
Strolling, skipping, and canoeing
Would have shocked the college folk—long ago.
No, they wooed at slower pace,
At proper time, in proper place—
Always with a chaperon,
For they never met alone—long ago.

Modern ways are quite alarming,
Grandma says; but men were charming—
Girls and men, I mean, of course—long ago;
Bravely modest, grandly shy.
What if college men should try
Just to be like that to-day—
To initiate the good old way of—long ago.

With such courtesies in fashion,
Who could fly into a passion?
All would wear the calm they wore—long ago.
In time to come, if I should tell
My own grandchild of old Bucknell,
I should really like to say,
We acted, dear, in some such way—long ago.

A Quasi-Fishing Episode

AGREEABLE to their usual habit of recreation, Dave Baldwin, alias Professor Colestock, and Registrar Gretzinger took a row on the Susquehanna one afternoon last autumn. They were in quest of members of the finny tribe—a statement made necessary by the manner and unfishermanlike appearance of their dress. A broad-brimmed straw hat, a boiled shirt with “come to glory” collar, a mud-colored coat, and light green, close-fitting trousers reaching almost to the top of a pair of number thirteen shoes—all taken together made Dave the double of Ichabod Crane; while his financial companion, wearing one of Benny Focht’s cast-off Stetson bonnets, a “buck and wing” collar, and a pair of canvas leggings, looked the part of a hybrid between a Tammany Hall politician and a Texas rough-rider.

This pair of quasi-fishermen paddled their water-wagon against a slight October breeze, which both the weather-vane waving of the historian’s few remaining locks and the deflated crown of the financier’s sky-piece pronounced to be coming from the west. They stemmed the current and the wind until they came to a place on the north bank, about half a mile from the Lewisburg river bridge. Here they found a peaceful eddy, hedged about by eel or pickerel grass—an excellent home for pike. Before unreeling, however, the professor wished to assuage his torrid, historical palate; but upon taking inventory of the sideboard stock he discovered that William C. had drained to the dregs about half the bottles of the joyous fluid while he, poor dupe, was rowing with his back to the foxy registrar. Henry T. then guzzled a couple without resting, and cautioned his already hilarious companion to take only a two-finger nip.

And then for the fish! The historical fossil vied with the purse-depleter in landing the first pike. The former, however, was "better equipped" than the latter; for "equal to the exigencies of the situation," he dispensed with his rod, wrapped the hookless end of the line about his protracted middle phalange, and with a kind of "read and re-read Elson" movement, cast his bait upon the water. Just as the historian was about to expatiate to his nascently impatient partner on "history as the gradually unfolding life-story of the race," his cork disappeared. Instantly becoming "acquainted with the subject-matter," he reeled in by winding his line about his digits in a knitting-machine fashion, and with a medieval grunt heaved into the boat a monster pike.

"Ha!" cried he, "all the annals of history embody no record of such a prodigy of the fiscal realm. Why, Gretz, even the miniature whale which Cleopatra had her divers put upon Mark Antony's hook would assume the proportions of a minnow if compared with my gasping prisoner. I prize that fish more highly than the priceless pearl which, dissolved in a cup of wine, the Egyptian queen drank to the health of her fascinated Roman lover."

This attack on the atmosphere was brushed aside by the purse-depleter in much the same way as he is wont to rid his office of Freshmen who enter only to make excuse for the non-payment of their college bill. Not to notice the fine catch of his fellow-fisherman, the registrar musingly said:

"Henry, do you see the myriads of diamonds sparkling all over the water? If the University had all the money represented by those phantom diamonds, we should put electric lights in the Library, build a new College office, erect a South College, construct a swimming pool, buy a new athletic field—in short, we should then relieve my conscience of the stress and strain brought to bear upon it every time I get out a University Bulletin or Catalogue."

At this juncture the classical sportsmen were interrupted by the game warden, who, flashing his official badge into their faces, commanded them to pull in to the shore. Gretz at once suggested flight—prompted of course by monetary motives—but Henry protested on the ground that they were "on the high sea," and "according to Elson" they were subject to "the law of the land." Elson's quoter prevailed. The fishing scene forthwith changed to one of argumentation and lip service. Subject to fine for catching pike out of season, the collegiate anglers now resorted to history and cheap diplomacy to wriggle out of their predicament. Dave kicked off.

"Well, really," essayed he while passing the wink to his pal, "I am not prepared to state, but my impression is that 'the background of this situation' is in the proposition that 'life is an adjustment.' 'With reference to' our violating the law, the ascertainment of the purpose of our act is 'prerequisite.' That word, purpose, 'occupies such a large place in community life and regime, and elementary law,' the latter of which I teach at Bucknell—'as it were.' Now our purpose in capturing this pike was not to commit a misdemeanor. It was simply to get away from school and studies—to get away from 'Elson—so to speak.' 'My library method of teaching history'—I am, via, professor of history at Bucknell University—requires a great deal of sedentary work. 'The mastery of Elson' likewise makes tremendous demands upon the midnight oil. As a result, I often go out for a fish with Mr. Gretzinger, who receipts so many students' bills in his capacity as registrar of the University that he, too, needs diversion and fresh air. On that ground, therefore, you should acquit us."

The warden, unable to view a flagrant violation of the law through the telescope of history, was about to turn on the legal machinery when Captain Gretzinger discharged the scheme he had launched up his sleeve while the author of "The Ministry of David Baldwin" was inflating the warden with "past tense hot air."

"I believe, warden," argued he, "that so far, at least, as I am concerned, I have the right to fish whenever I see fit to do so. I am the official registrar of the Orange and Blue. As such, I am authorized to do anything of a financial or fiscal nature. Now a financial year does not always correspond with a calendar year. Hence, there is what is called a fiscal year—a year in which a fiscal officer may fish throughout the entire fiscal year. So I have not violated the law."

This explanation satisfied the warden as to Gretz's innocence—but what about Dave? When it dawned upon the historical scribe that the brunt of the whole affair must fall upon him, his long, lank form collapsed and toppled over the boat into the water. After fishing him out, Gretz motioned the warden to one side and approached him thus:

"You see, warden, the poor fellow there has just lost a large sum of money in publishing his latest novel, 'The Ministry of David Baldwin.' He sold only four copies of his book, and these were autograph copies. Besides he feels the present money stringency. Now, have you any children?"

"Yes," replied the Fish Commissioner, "I have a son, six years of age."

"Good," said W. G. "I'll get him a scholarship when he comes to Bucknell, and (this in an undertone to Dave) make up for the same by padding his college bill. In addition to that, we'll give you that pike and the two remaining bottles of 'blue ribbon' if you will let us off only this one single time. What say you?"

The unfaithful warden answered by swallowing the beer, slipping the fish into his pocket, and saying "Mum's the word" to the breath-regaining fishermen, who straightway paddled home—the one to don dry clothes, the other to tell the boys how he hoodwinked the easy warden.

With chestnut hair
And turnip nose,
And lips just like a cherry—
With hazel eyes
And cheeks of rose—
She is my huckleberry.

Naughty little Soph'mores,
With their little shears,
Cause the trembling Freshmen
Many loads of fears.

Hope

Hope!—thou word almost divine—
Come fill this poor, sad heart of mine.
My life is far too grey and cold
Till I a gleam of thee behold.

Ah, Hope, but for thy gentle light,
I might alway be lone and drear!
But when thou com'st to my dim sight,
All gloom is gone—I know but cheer.

Now, grief, thine enemy is here—
'Tis hope, blest hope, which brings good cheer.
Begone, thou shadow of the night!
Behold the dawn in radiance bright!

Them Brick Sidewalks

I

There are sidewalks of stone—smooth, level and good
There are some made of concrete, and some made of wood
Now 'gainst what I've mentioned I've nary a kick,
But gol durn them others they make out of brick!

II

I ne'er saw one yet you could walk on half right,
For they're tricky in daytime, and still worse at night.
You blunder and stumble, like you're dizzy or sick,
On them gol-durn old sidewalks they make out of brick.

III

They're chuck full of hollows, and then full of bumps,
Like an old camel's back with a million of humps;
You struggle along, and your voice it gits thick,
As you "gol durn" them sidewalks they make out of brick.

IV

There's nary a season—fall, winter, ner spring—
But they're slippery, er muddy, er some other thing
That makes you bad-humored and wish that "Old Nick"
Had every durn sidewalk they make out of brick.

A Prep Trick

IT was the old story. A "Prep" stayed out after curfew rang, and was caught as he attempted to gain his room by means of the fire-escape. The next morning he was summoned to the President's office to receive his sentence.

"Harding, you have broken the night rule, and I shall campus you for six weeks," said the President, sternly.

"But, Doctor, I would like to explain; I—"

"I don't see how you can explain a flagrant disobedience, Mr. Harding."

"I couldn't help it, Doctor, and I think I can explain if you will permit me."

"Very well; be brief."

"Well, I was calling on a young lady, and at ten minutes before ten I arose, put on my overcoat and started to leave."

"Yes."

"At five minutes before ten I was saying 'good-night' and would have gotten here on time, when the thing happened that made me late."

"Well, what happened?"

"Why, just then a pretty, fair-haired, blue-eyed girl put her arms around my neck and begged me to stay. Now, Doctor, wouldn't you have stayed?"

A look of astonishment, a hearty laugh, and then—

"I don't know who could have done otherwise. Sentence is suspended, Harding. You may go."

"Would a man be generous who had a doughnut and gave his chum the w(hole) of it?" is a question that is disturbing the peace of Earle's mind at the present time.

Prep Grub

You may kick against your boarding,
You may knock about your club;
But you don't know what you're saying
'Til you've tried to eat "Prep" grub.

For the bugs are in the oatmeal,
And the cobs are in the corn,
And the beefsteak makes you wonder
In what year that cow was born.

Pie-crust made of India rubber;
Potatoes served up in the shell;
Sausage made of dogs and leather,
And the butter strong as—well.

Pancakes cold and flat and heavy;
Cocoa pale and full of dope;
Milk that's sour, skimmed, and watered;
Cheese that tastes like shaving soap.

Hash cakes, too, three times a day;
Eggs that failed to hatch young chicks;
Oyster soup without the oysters;
Bread they'd used for paving bricks.

Fruit that's old, decayed, and putrid;
In the gravy parboiled flies;
Muddy coffee filled with water;
Cake that's dyed with Diamond Dyes.

Peas are just as hard as bullets;
Chicken, too, that is all neck;
Apple-sauce—you'd never guess it;
Boiled cabbage by the peck.

Pickles cooked in nitric acid;
Maple syrup—so they say;
Sugar full of sand and gravel;
Cold-slaw made of baled hay.

And at last, but least by no means,
Comes the stuff they call "ice cream"—
Milk and sugar, frozen solid—
Things are seldom what they seem.

So, perhaps, you ask in wonder,
How we live in such a place.
Oh! we've learned to grin and bear it
And to say a little grace.

'Tis the simple life we're living—
Fast the body, feed the soul;
If we keep it up much longer,
Heaven will surely be our goal.

The Morning After

Did you ever in the morning,
When you first got out of bed,
Have a-burning in your stomach
And a-hurting in your head?
When the whole wide world looks gloomy,
And just living seems a bore?
Ten to one, I know the reason—
You were out the night before.

Sun is shining, birds are singing,
Still you're feeling sort of blue;
Like to sleep a little longer—
Wish you'd nothing else to do:
Sort of envy old Van Winkle
And his twenty years of snore—
That's what comes the morning after,
When you're out the night before.

Look around to find your clothing,
Sort of shaky like and queer.
One shoe's off, the other's on yet,
Necktie's hanging on your ear;
Coat's a-clinging to the bedpost,
Hat's a-lying on the floor—
Surely all things seem to tell you
You were out the night before.

But you're finally up and sobered,
Things have straightened out at last,
And you know just how you got there—
You've remembered all the past:
Then you make resolves to quit it—
Ne'er to touch booze any more;
But you'll soon forget your promise,
Like you did the night before.

A Sweet Dream Ended

Musing she sits in the chair,
Her finger held in a book;
The sun to gold turns her hair—
In her eyes is a far-away look.

Back in the cushion she nestles,
Building her castles in air;
A footstep sounds, the curtain rustles—
A manly form stands by her chair.

O'er her he leans till his hair
Touches her own soft and gold;
A gentle question, a groan, a prayer—
A tooth is pulled by the dentist old.

His Proposal

In her ear he sweetly murmured,
"Will you be my little wife—
Live with me and make me happy—
Be my helpmate all through life?"

But the cruel maiden answered,
"How can I from Music part?
'Tis well known to all my suitors
That I'm wedded to my art."

He was not to be discouraged—
Was determined to use force;
Said he to the stubborn maiden,
"Sue your Music for divorce."

Inspection Day

IN the early part of the school year the following notice appeared on the bulletin board:

"There will be an inspection of all rooms in the Main and West College buildings at 10:30 A. M., Saturday, November 2nd, 1907.

(Signed) "GRETZ."

On the Friday afternoon preceding and in the early morning of the day for inspection, the rooms and halls of the college buildings presented scenes of very unwonted activity. Everywhere could be heard the swish, swish, of brooms and the sound of moving furniture. The air was filled with a choking dust; the halls were loaded with great piles of debris. Truly, inspection day was to mark an epoch in the history of many a student's room.

Within the rooms the fellows were busy at various cleansing processes. Some, down on their knees, with gasoline bottle in one hand and a rag in the other, were removing grease spots from the rugs and carpet, or else, with sharp-pointed instruments of their own invention, were digging dirt out of the cracks in the floor. Others, on chairs and tables, were brushing cobwebs from the corners, dusting off the molding and scraping fly-specks from the wall. Still others, with patent deodorizers and perfume sprinklers, were making desperate efforts to purify the atmosphere and rid it of its odor of tobacco smoke and onion sandwiches.

At promptly 10:30 o'clock a queer-looking procession came down the hall to begin the inspection. First, came "Gretz," dressed complete in a sanitary outfit, such as is used in the visitation of smallpox cases. In one hand he had a pair of army binoculars, in the other a powerful microscope. Next came Dr. Groff, dressed like "Gretz," but carrying a squirt gun loaded with a strong solution of potassium cyanide. Last came Superintendent Burpee, rigged out as were the others; he carried a large sterilized writing pad and pencil. This was the committee of inspection.

They entered a room and began the work. "Gretz" got down on his knees and with the aid of the microscope examined all the cracks in the floor and the surface of all the rugs and carpets. Woe to that microbe who was unfortunate enough to be caught napping in his usual cozy corner, for "Gretz" was sure to see him and report his presence to the Doctor; whereupon "Doc" Groff would stop just long enough to identify the species discovered and report it to Burpee to record; then he would pounce upon the unlucky bug and with a single squirt of KCN down his throat lay him low forever.

When they had completed the examination of the floor, the committee attacked the walls. They dumped all desks, cozy-corners and like obstacles into the middle of the floor, so as to permit a clear sweep of the walls in case any of the enemy should try to escape by flight. Up, up, went the microscope as high as it would reach, and when that failed the binoculars were brought into play on the corners and ceiling, and as the search proceeded, the corpse of many a luckless bug, who had failed to escape the charge of that deadly gun, fell to the floor with a sickening thud.

One funny thing happened. At one of the radiators "Gretz" spied something and called the Doctor. "Doc" instantly shouted out "giganticus orinithocephalus lucnelensis!" and took aim at the bug. But the old fellow saw him first and dodged behind one of the iron sections of the radiator. Here he was secure, and all attempts to dislodge him failed. But as they had to have him out of there, Burpee called Townsend and had him take the radiator apart. Then they found that the supposed specimen of "giganticus" was nothing but a decrepit old fly who had been taking a steam bath for his rheumatism and endeavoring to keep his life-blood in circulation until the warm spring sunshine should return again.

Thus far the attack had been on the study. The invaders next proceeded to the dormitory, where they repeated the performance with slight change of method. They opened the wardrobes, spreading havoc as they went. Alas for those fellows who thought they could conceal the condition of affairs behind closed doors! Trunks and chiffonier suffered the same fate, and their contents were heaped in confusion upon the floor.

The last articles attacked were the beds. After completely disrobing these, they ripped open the pillows and mattresses and put them through a searching examination. "Gretz" went at this work with the same persistence that he does in sending the fellows invitations to pay their college bills. So thorough was he in his search that you might have thought he expected to find the money of some of the delinquents hidden in the mattresses, but there was nothing doing.

The devastation was now almost complete. The rooms bore the appearance of being scientifically stacked. Hosts of the enemy had been destroyed, and their bodies lay in tangled heaps upon the floor; and after a few instructions for the disposition of the corpses, the committee moved on.

The Morning Bell

Out of dreams so rich and rare
It pulls us with a vacant stare.
From babbling brooks and sunny climes
It calls us with its tuneless chimes.

The river Lethe flows so calm,
The pillow lures with endless charm;
Yet all must vanish like a flash
At the bell's untimely clash.

Into the realm of peace and rest,
Where life seems real and all so blest,
Comes the harsh and clanging tread
Of him we all so soundly dread.

We long for just five minutes more,
We think that bells are such a bore,
We wonder if it is so late,
And try our best to get awake.

We yawn, and stretch, and rub our eyes,
And say our ears have told us lies;
But there it is—the bell at last,
And we must dress most wondrous fast.

The Clock Speaks

NOT long since I took a week off from business up the hill—that is, I still covered my faces with my hands and still beat the fellows' time; but I confined my observations solely to the range commanded by one of my faces—the one that looks down the hill and beyond the 1906 bridge. Falling in with the spirit of my surroundings I took notes during the course of that week, jotting them down on some handy oak leaves. These are some of the jottings that I found among the nineteen hundred seven other things floating around my belfry:

MONDAY—There! I mustn't let Mary Slawson's alarm clock get in ahead of me. Five A. M.—Will she have time to go over that whole Greek lesson that she studied thoroughly on Saturday night, but forgot over Sunday? Poor Mary! If only she wouldn't take Greek so seriously. Why even Professor Hamblin himself considers it all a huge joke compared with what she regards it.

Six A. M.—I must ring up those steam pipes or they'll forget to make their charge that throws the girls out of bed, folds up the beds, shakes all the windows noisily, and gives the effect of a brilliant overture for the day.

Ten A. M.—Everything going at full blast! Downstairs Miss Schillinger is trying to out-shout her strongest-lunged pupil in a piece of high tragedy. In the kitchen, the maids are airing their vocal apparatuses lustily over the clattering dishes. Upstairs, in the parlor, Miss Isaac is trying her best to outdo "Chief" Parsons in a deep bass solo, but isn't succeeding very well. At the "Gym" piano Beth Mulford is reeling off ragtime, forty-five inches to the yard, while at every corner throughout the three buildings electric bells are wildly screeching, on the general principle that there is more likely something doing that ought to be rung off than not.

Six forty-five P. M.—Time for chapel—S-h-h-h! "Tommy" is choosing the hymn to be sung; don't disturb him; it is a matter of life and death. At last he announces it, and all sink back with relief that the crisis is past and then drag through eight stanzas of "Now the Day is Over." Then he calls the roll—one hundred forty names, and after each one he must needs clear his throat, wipe his glasses, and gaze around for approval. It is the one time of the day when doing their duty and neglecting their work are synonymous terms to "Tommy's" charges.

Seven P. M.—Ah! the "Orange and Blue" has arrived. What's that? They're all reading the advertisements. "No time to read it all through, so we just read the most important part," they say. Ah, yes, I see! Cf. Woodpecker Staff.

Nine P. M.—Study hour over. Some have been studying English Bible. They have mustered a meagre but courageous band under a modern Gideon; there they go through the halls carrying huge white water-pitchers and tiny candles, and singing "Marching Through Georgia." Crash! smash! the pitchers are in fragments, and in one great, concurrent, indignant body all the teachers of the "Sem" rush to the spot to demand explanation and retribution. To little purpose. Oh, fie, incorrigibles!

TUESDAY, twelve M.—What, I'd like to know, are those three girls doing there leaning far out the window and laughing down at someone? Oh, it's ice-cream day and "Daddy" Kahle is turning the freezer just outside the kitchen, and they are pelt-ing him with missiles from above—chunks of petrified fudge galore! H'm, it's a wonder if they won't have chocolate ice-cream for dinner to-night and get back what they've sent.

Six-thirty P. M.—In the old "Gym," dancing; everyone is there; the floor is like a washboard, but what care they! Who couldn't dance anywhere to "Afraid to Go Home in the Dark" and "Honey Boy"? There goes the prayer-meeting bell! A rush and a scramble—oh, no! not to prayer-meeting; it's "too late" or "they're too tired from dancing." Woe unto ye!

Seven-thirty P. M.—Electric bell again—this time the call to Freshmen to assem-ble in the lower hall to start for the basketball game. At the door of his room Pro-fessor Aviragnet is urging upon a passing Freshman girl his little camp-stool: "It will be comfortab' for you at ze game!" But she smiles him away and hastens on. In the front hall a bevy of importunate gentlemen are thrusting their cards into the hands of the bewildered little maid. What is it that one of them is pressing into her hand with his little bit of pasteboard? The maid looks uncomprehending, but she goes and in a few minutes she is delivering to a fair lass a card and a ten-cent piece. The lass looks at the coin for an instant with a puzzled expression, then hands it to the maid and proceeds leisurely to comb her hair, clean her shoes, and write a short letter before she dons her wraps and saunters down to the impatient gentleman who is silently heaping anathemas upon the poor little maid.

Nine P. M.—I smell oyster stew. Yes, there, in that suite! Such huge oysters, but they are using condensed milk for the stew—"Forgot to get other kind of milk, but this will do, surely." In another chafing dish across the room a batch of fudge is being briskly stirred up. "The chocolate in this fudge has been packed away with camphor in a box of things for a year; I just fished it out to-day, but it'll be all right, I guess." Alas, for digestions!

WEDNESDAY, eleven-fifteen A. M.—Lohengrin and Mendelssohn! Why, there are at least seven or eight couples strolling down that long path. Talk about pro-moting co-education! That one little apple tree at the gate will have more to answer for than even "Tommy" could compute.

Seven-thirty P. M.—That electric bell again. To-night it's one of the Y. M. C. A. courses. A crowd of the girls assemble; the chaperon draws near, looks them over, and marshals them out to the porch. Just as they have reached the steps two more girls rush through the hall and pass the office door. "Tommy" darts out and seizes them: "The chaperon has gone; you will have to remain at home." "Oh, but our tickets! we must go! we can overtake the chaperon easily if you let us go now." "Not to be thought of. Perhaps we can get another chaperon for you—I'll consider the matter; meanwhile, you can sit down and wait." Oh, red tape! red tape!

THURSDAY, six P. M.—In the dining-room. What's this we have at one of the tables? A birthday party. Yes, there comes the cake ablaze with candles—twenty of them. Now each one at the table must try her luck at blowing them out. The teacher first; she gives a puff that leaves seven still burning. Expressions of involun-tary commiseration on the faces around her; then, quickly reassuring, "Oh, you'll be just the right age to get married, Miss——!" And now while I'm here I'll have a look at the Senior table. Ah, there it is!--Miss Bush at the head, a Stage "setting" on one side of her, a Tiffany "setting" on the other, and the right Bower next (this Bower is never left). Unique groups they make.

Nine P. M.—Polite vaudeville performance in full swing in South Hall. Such a racket, such rousing applause! Down the hall patters the hall teacher, very much distressed. A general subsiding ensues, but is followed immediately by indications of an old ladies' sewing circle having been suddenly organized; and the high, cracked trebles are almost more distressing than were the various sounds of the vaudeville. But nine-thirty comes and the crowd disperses. Those who live in Oak Hall must flee, for I notice that every night at this time the door that connects Oak Hall with the Main Building is securely locked. At first I wondered at this, but have since decided that the reason must be due to a belief that if a fire should break out in either building, the locked door would certainly prevent the other building from becoming involved in the conflagration—a somewhat unstable theory.

FRIDAY, twelve-thirty—at the lunch table.—"What's that you say? Spanish exam. You're scared? you don't know anything about it? Oh, just ask Professor and he'll write it all down on the board for you. He doesn't believe in seeing people flunk when he can help them out."

Seven P. M.—Mission Study Class. This evening the topic is "Present Conditions in Hawaii." But the attendants at the class will persist in beating time with their feet to the dance music floating down from the floor directly above. So the class is dismissed early and there is a migration to the scene of the dance.

Eight-thirty P. M.—The scene of the dance has changed to one of a "spread." Not all the girls are here as yet, so a part of the brick of ice-cream is dealt out and the rest is laid on a tray and placed in the snow on the fire-escape to keep hard. But see those two fair maidens creeping stealthily up the fire-escape from the floor below; they heard the placing of the ice-cream there. Swiftly and noiselessly they seize the tray and bear it down with them; they get it safely to the window—a sudden slip—the whole chunk of ice-cream goes sliding smoothly across the roof and into the snow below. Sad fate!

SATURDAY—"Old Gum Shoes" forgot to wind me last night and here I've been sleeping all day. But I was out late; I don't know how late, I lost count, but I know I struck something, and then I didn't know any more until now, and it's seven P. M. Almost time for callers—see those two girls sneaking in behind the cloak rack in the hall! They want to hear things; they'll hear all they want.

Eight P. M.—Annex for mine. There's a thrilling game of five hundred on there. Girls certainly aren't afraid to bid high; they risk too much. There, I said so; she's gone deeper in the hole than she can get out. I never believe in bidding higher than twelve, and that no more than twice a day.

Ten P. M.—Cards over, they're going to have a comb orchestra now. There they go, eight of them, each with a comb; all playing "He Rambled," and all in different keys. Now it's "Starlight"—oh, there comes Miss Wood! "Girls, this is outrageous. Half-past ten, and all this hubbub! You will be reported in the office to-morrow and very probably sent to President Harris on Monday. Go to your rooms immediately." Silence in the camp.

SUNDAY, seven-forty-five A. M.—Oranges, doughnuts and eggs for breakfast instead of the hackneyed week-day diet of prunes, crackers, and tough beefsteak.

Eight-fifteen—Sunday newspapers.

Eleven—What shall we wear to dinner?

One P. M.—Ragtime in the parlor.

Two P. M.—Fudge-making in some rooms, hair-shampooing in others.

Five-thirty P. M.—“I’m going to Christian Forever.” “Oh, why?” “Well, I want to shake hands with Mr.—— on our way out!” “All right, then; we’ll get our studying done later.”

My week was over. It had been novel, to be sure; the half has not been told. One thing, the girls of the “Sem” will surely be ready when the last call comes, for their lights are nearly always burning at midnight.

The Stages of Genius

When your soul is gaunt and hungry just for something great to do;
When you wish you were a genius, poet, painter, sculptor, too,
That the world might sing your praises as you make your way to fame,
Till you reach the highest summit and emblazon there your name—

That's Aspiration.

When you do not have an idea, and you want one mighty bad;
When your head seems all but empty, and for anything you're glad,
Something comes from out the nowhere as you gaze away in space,
And you grasp it quickly, wildly, and you work it into place—

That's Inspiration.

When you've worked an age on something which you hoped would be quite new;
When your work has been a failure, tho' the best that you could do;
Then you pace the room in madness, gnashing teeth and clawing hair,
Till your strength is all exhausted and you sink into a chair—

That's Desperation.

When your blood is up and boiling, at one hundred in the shade;
When with brain and muscles striving you have little progress made;
Then great streams of briny water flowing out from every pore,
Make you think that all your genius is for work, and nothing more—

That's Perspiration.

When your work draws to a finish, in this busy world of sin;
When you never more will struggle, and your genius is "all in;"
Then you lie so cold and lifeless, with a smile upon your face,
While your soul is somewhere loafing, for it could not stand the pace—

That's Expiration.

Don't Cry

Don't cry, little Freshman, don't cry;
They have shaved your head, I know,
But the hair that is stubby and stiff just now,
Won't take very long to grow.

Don't cry, little Soph'more, don't cry;
All the world hates you, I know,
You were beaten in rushes and basketball, too,
But in football you conquered your foe.

Don't cry, Junior men, don't cry;
They have sent you to Prexy, I know;
But the man who has labored in Bucknell Hall
Has plenty of knowledge to show.

Don't boast, mighty Seniors, don't boast;
You have conquered vast fields, we'll admit;
But we've studied your work from the first to the last,
And learned every course was a "snit."

A confused array of spectators in the gallery, to whom your attention is called every few moments; the excited players in an interesting game on the floor below; no idea at all of the score and its progress; a running fire of conversation on all topics but the game that interests you—that is "seeing the basketball game with a girl."

The Student's Dream

One night, as I lay dreaming, upon my little bed,
There passed this bit of nonsense through my sleepy head:
I dreamed that we were walking, my Cic-Ero and I,
Way out along the turnpike, five miles or mighty nigh;
When through the stillness of the air, that peaceful summer day,
We heard a roar, an awful sound, we heard an Alge-bra.
Self-preservation was our thought, and so we turned to flee;
When at our side—oh, joy betide!—stood a big Geom-e-try.
We climbed that tree in double-quick and perched up in the branches,
While that beast below refused to go, thus cutting off our chances.
Oh! how I wished I had my Trig, but that was far away,
So we yelled and yelled till we were Horace, as night succeeded day.
We stayed all night in that old tree, and the beast kept watch below;
I prayed, denounced, beseeched, implored—and so did Cic-Ero.
And when at last the morning came, we took a long Survey
Of all the country round about, both near and far away.
When, as we looked, a form appeared which filled our hearts with cheer,
Our dear young friend, a German lad, was slowly Drawing near.
As he approached we yelled again: he turned and saw our plight;
Then quickly hurled a big Black-stone and put that beast to flight.
We clambered down from off our perch, up in that friendly tree;
While I was glad, my Cic's joy was something Od-y-ssey.
We stood and talked a little Spell, and then set out for home,
Resolved to Liv-y quiet life and never more to roam—
Just then my old alarm clock, that always runs so steady,

Preparing for the Reception

Part 1—The Girl

THIS is the jolliest place down here at the "Sem." I am in just the position to see it all, for I dwell in a girl's mirror, and that, you know, is the central figure in the room.

This is the night of all nights for fun. I have company for hours. It is the night of the College Girls' Reception. As soon as dinner was over the girl who shares the mirror with me came rushing in and stood looking straight into my eyes. Sometimes we smiled at each other, but more often we frowned. She left me and searched in her trunk among a rainbow cloud and finally piled on the bed the daintiest of all the cloud.

Then she came back to me and took down her hair. I realized that I would gaze into her face for minutes, nay, perhaps for hours. She combed those locks up and she combed them down. She knotted them and she twisted them. Oh, the hairpins she used!—big ones, little ones and middle-sized ones. Next she seized a hand-glass, turned her back on me and pushed a comb in here and a comb in there. Then she turned to the left and to the right, bowed low and viewed the effect, changed a hairpin and bowed again. She leaned back until I could almost touch her, but immediately turned to face me, took the whole thing down and went at it again. After three or four such performances she decided that it would do; then she took up a wreath of ribbon flowers, and as she placed them in her hair, sighed, "Oh, that they were real!"

Now she rushed frantically out into Bobb's Alley and I could hear the exclamations of the girls as they viewed the result. Soon she came back with two others, whose hair must be done just like hers. This finished, she took a look at her own again; evidently it was satisfactory, for she took up the airy stuff on the bed and with the greatest care dropped it over her head. Surely, I thought, now this won't take long. But the hair was nothing compared with the operation now on hand. There were buttons to be buttoned here, and hooks to be hooked there—and pins!—well, pins were needed everywhere. Now, she gave a pull and a jerk, and after every move the hand-mirror was brought into play. I received nothing but frowns, frowns. After a very long time she gave another pull and settled a bow on her shoulder. Everything at last was in place. She turned to me with a radiant smile and looked long at me. Then she picked up a tiny bit of lawn and embroidery and went out, and I could hear her calling gayly to the girls as she went down the hall.

Part 2—The Man

The evening was that of the College Girls' Reception, when at about 7 P. M. a Senior hustled into his room to make ready for the first social stunt of his college career.

Before him lay an array of broadcloth, leather and linen, which he looked over and itemized to see that he had omitted nothing. Then he soliloquized:

"Now, how the thunder am I going to get into those togs without help from someone? But here goes; I'll begin with the easiest."

A half-hour later his chum came down through the hall whistling, and as he approached his room he stopped to listen to the most elaborate outflow of cuss-words that he had heard since Bob (the one within) had quit playing poker and joined the Y. M. C. A. He laughed, entered the room and went over to the dormy whence the expressive remarks were still pouring. There he found Bob perched on the edge of the bed, half-dressed and holding in his hand a broken shirt-stud which had been the innocent cause of the outbreak above mentioned.

"Well, what's the matter, Bob?" asked his chum, with a grin.

"Oh!—such things as shirt-studs, dress-suits, receptions and everything connected with 'em. I worked for half an hour trying to connect up this d-n shirt, and then busted the coupling pin."

A laugh not unmixed with sympathy burst from Bob's chum. Then he offered his assistance.

"Here, old man, let me help you," and in a few minutes the proper connection was made, and Bob, encased in the shirt, felt like an animated plaster cast that could move its head, arms and legs. Then came a struggle with a refractory three-inch collar, and when at last that was anchored to the shirt, the plaster-cast feeling was more complete, for now he could move only his arms and legs.

"Nope; never learned how—go out and get one of the fellows to tie it for you."

The two started down the hall together, Bob going from room to room in a fruitless endeavor to secure the desired assistance, while his chum went on down and out of the building. At various places Bob was treated to words of advice, such as:

"Wear a four-in-hand, Bob."

"Wait till you get down to the Sem and have the girl tie it for you."

"Why not wear your army shirt?"

At each remark Bob's temper rose and his face grew more red. Large drops of perspiration rolled down his neck and under his collar, threatening to rob it of its stateliness and its immaculate appearance. But at last Bob found a skillful friend; the tie expanded like a white butterfly beneath his chin, and a moment later he came back to his room whistling unconsciously, "Cheer up, Mary!" The agony was nearly over now, and as each new garment was added to his outfit Bob's horizon cleared.

He entered his room and glanced at his watch. It was seven-fifty o'clock, and he was going down at eight. "Guess I'll have to step some, or I'll be too late to charge the firing line and get the glad hand from Tommy and his chicks," he observed as he seized his toothpowder and brush, made a dash from the room and began to scrub away like mad.

"What the devil ails this toothpowder!" he gasped as he expelled the contents of his mouth, "it never—h-l! I've got the talcum powder box!"

But poor Bob's troubles were not yet at an end, for when he came out of his room he thoughtlessly slammed the door behind him, and now returned to find it closed and locked. Excitedly he fumbled for his keys; then he remembered that they were inside on his dresser. "Open sesame" would not phase those two-inch panels, so he started to hunt the janitor. Agonized shrieks of "Dewire! Dewire! Hey, Dewire!" re-echoed through the halls; but Dewire was not to be found. Bob returned in despair to his room. There was but one thing left for him to do, viz., to scale that oak fortress and go in through the transom. After a couple of wild clutches Bob scrambled up on the door-knob, supporting himself with one hand as he pounded open the transom with his other. Then he began to squirm through the narrow opening—this way and that he wriggled—then stuck—he could neither advance nor retreat; the air became sulphurous, and for a time it looked as if Bob were to spend the rest of the evening suspended over his doorway. He yelled for help—it came—and after vigorous lifting and pushing he dropped heavily to the floor within.

There he stood and gazed at himself. His shirt was snow-white no longer, nor were his trousers clean and black. He had collected from over his doorway the dust of sweep-days for years. But there was no time to hunt another shirt now, and, besides, he felt that he could never reach his present state of development unaided. He brushed the dirt from his clothes and covered up his shirt-front as much as possible; then, with a final touch here and there, he grabbed his hat and coat, put them on as he went and hurried out of the building. He was just in time—for the reception? oh, no—to receive the full benefit of a ten-pound sack of water that some evil-minded individual hurled from a fourth-story window. Bob was a complete wreck. He did not swear now—no words were adequate to the occasion—but, wet and drooping, he returned to his room. Fifteen minutes later he again passed down the hall, when someone yelled after him:

“Going to the Reception, Bob?”

“Reception, h—l! Baker House!”

“I am on my last legs,” remarked the centipede, as he gingerly balanced himself on his one hundredth pair of pedal extremities.

Moderation

Every blessing unrestrained,
Every joy too loosely reined,
Every pleasure overdone
Barely soothes us ere 'tis gone;
And the helpful blessing dies—
A foul carcass there it lies,
Calling forth, in bitter cries,
"Beware the fair and pleasing skies!"

While in youth we thoughtless shape
Bands of habit which seal our fate,
And determine by our thought
What after-life shall have wrought.
Let us pause amid our joys,
Strive to be much nobler boys,
And the man, the boy grown tall,
Will be the crowning glory of it all.

Strange, is it not, that the automobile has to be retired in order to be kept in active service.

"English Bards and Scotch Reviewers"

Translated into Modern English and
Adapted to the Needs of Bucknell

Still must I list? Shall the L'Agenda knock,
And send broadsides of lead and rock,
And I not sing, lest Bromley's bright reviews
Should dub me silly scribbler, minus muse?
No! Teddylike, I'll fight against the wrong:
Saints are my theme; let Satire be my song!

And first we'll look into the Faculty,
In which no one can fail to see
The glass of Harvard, wherein all Bucknell
With Harvard strut doth dress itself full well.
And yet how pleasant is it, ever to see
Fond friends together dwell in unity.
See Prexy, seated in his chair of state!
With look profound, the nodding hearers wait.
"A motion is in order, sirs, to pass
The members of the present Senior class."
Each Prof. awakes, gives quick assent, and then
Returns unto the shores of sleep again.
Once more I say, a pleasant sight to see
Fond friends together dwell in unity.

The grave and reverend Seniors now behold—
Their wisdom-sated faces, calm and cold.
The Juniors next our close attention call,
In beauty and in brilliance, best of all.
Then Sophomores, banal product of the earth,
To all a source of laughter and of mirth.
And the young Freshmen, in their verdant green,
The nerviest Bucknell has ever seen.

In every class, the ministerial crew,
To Venus loyal, and to Bacchus true,
Count that day lost whose brightly shining sun
Reveals no maiden or no wine-cask won.
All week, like David, through the dance they glide,
And ministerial euchre play, beside;
On Sunday, with no conscientious qualms,
Pervert the prophets and misquote the Psalms.

But in the Library we find the place
Where every day is seen each student's face.
Oh, blest retreat of learning and of ease!
Where, all forgotten but the power to please,
Each maid may give free rein to genial thought;
Each swain may teach erotics or be taught.
And here the learned grinds we also see,
Each volume penetrating like the bee,
To find out if the Romans ate mince pies,
And if Athena really had blue eyes,
And what Hellenic or Germanic fool
Invented reasoning by rote and rule.
Yet sanctum of all sanctums is this not:
A little higher up is that blest spot
Where Bromley the Delsarte lore explains
And where Demosthenes in glory reigns.

E'en still my tale of woe is incomplete
In substance, though correct in rhymes and feet.

The morning bell rings forth its daily call:
"Come, students, hasten quick to Bucknell Hall."
With lagging step, the Profs. pace up the aisle,
The girls and boys exchange a nod and smile;
Each student reaches for his book and pen,
Proceeds to con his morning task, and then
Torments his luckless neighbor, while in vain
The choir sings on in loud, stentorian strain,
And Prexy gazes around with awful eye,
And seeks, without result, the reason why.

Ah! would my tongue and pen forever last,
And were this fleeting life not ever past,
Still indignation would bid me indite
Such lines as I or the Woodpecker write.
But other fields claim my attention, too,
And I must now move on to pastures new.

"That fellow seems to me to possess but one idea, and that is a wrong one."

L. E. JONES:

"Too late I stayed—forgive the crime—
Unheeded flew the hours;
How noiseless falls the foot of time
That only treads on flowers!"

CHARLES ELSON:

"Up! up! my friend, and quit your books!
Or surely you'll grow double!
Up! up! my friend, and clear your looks!
Why all this toil and trouble?"

S. H. ROLFE:

"In the world I fill up a place which may be better supplied when empty."

KATHERINE HEINEN:

"She is pretty to walk with
And pretty to talk with,
And pleasant, too, to think on."

"What stature is she of?
Just as high as my heart."

ALICE FOUST:

"Her voice was ever soft, gentle, and low—
An excellent thing in woman."

J. W. GRANFIELD:

"I am not lean enough to be thought a good student."

ETHEL COCKBURN:

"Her whose worth makes other worthies nothing."

C. R. MALLERY:

"We grant, although he had much wit,
He was very shy in using it."

The "Great Elevator"

ON a chilly night in the latter part of October, a well-known member of 1909, and incidentally a "Society Shark," decided to do a little "fussing." During the course of events, the duty of escorting two of Lewisburg's fairest damsels to their parental domicile devolved upon him.

Now it seemed that the pater familias had strictly forbidden that any of the species man should enter the sacred portals of his sanctum after 10 P. M., and the college clock had struck 10:30 just as the trio reached the gate. 'Tis true that partings are hard, and this was no exception. Each maiden clung to her favorite gatepost, while the gentleman leaned heavily on the one hinged gate hanging between. One long hour passed in this way, when suddenly the younger maiden, who could endure it no longer, said to her sister:

"Do you think papa would object if we were to bring the 'Great Elevator' in?"

The sister hesitated a moment and then replied: "I fear he would."

"Well, my feet are getting cold, so we will say good-night, Mr. Guyer."

Payne's Table d'Hote

Whene'er we think of Bucknell and the good old times we knew,
In our ardent search for knowledge 'neath the Orange and the Blue,
Fond memories round will gather, which time can ne'er efface,
As we dream of bygone pleasures which haunt the dear old place.
We'll remember Bell and Hoskins, and the way we rode the goat,
But the thing we will remember best is Payne's Table d'Hote.

This Payne he was a Dutchman, you could tell it by his face,
For the smell of pork and sauer-kraut was all around the place.
When first he came to Bucknell, the town was fresh and green,
All the boys were flush with money; paper, too, was often seen;
And having kept a sandwich house of quite a little note,
He started up a big café, and ran it table d'hote.

The bill of fare was pretty long and rendered quite "au fait"
By the use of many foreign terms in a funny sort of way.
From "Fricassee au Champignons" to plain Hamburger steak,
I guess he had most anything a "cuisiniere" could make.
And many a hard-up Freshman has pawned his Sunday coat
For wherewithal to pay the price at Payne's Table d'Hote.

Though his desserts were sloppy and some resembled glue,
And the way they made a fellow feel was always rather blue;
But still we ate and liked them and took another plate,
And in spite of pains on the morrow, we ate, and ate, and ate;
For the pains and aches of the morrow were of precious little note
By the side of what was offered at Payne's Table d'Hote.

Old Tales Retold

I

Tom, Tom, the college dean,
Every time a pair was seen,
Chased the boy:
The maiden coy
Considered with reproachful mien.

II

Three blind boys!
See how they run!
They all ran after a college girl.
She cut them each a golden curl,
And sent them home with brains a-whirl—
Three blind boys!

III

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"
"To Bucknell College, sir," she said.
"What do you there, my pretty maid?"
"I'll marry a minister, sir," she said.

FOUR YEARS LATER

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"
"Home from college, sir," she said.
"Did you marry a preacher, my pretty maid?"
"Oh, no, I've seen how preachers are made!"

IV

Mary had a little sheep,
His fleece was black as ink;
She tied a ribbon on his curls,
And begged him not to drink.

But of one thing our sheepie dear
Was quite extremely fond:
Fudge was his cry, by night, by day—
He'd eat it by the pound.

So Mary made some fudge, one day—
Three panfuls and a box;
He threw it out the window and
It killed a full-grown ox.

And now when Mary and her sheep
Across each other run,
She looks down the crowded street,
And he up at the sun.

V

Little drops of water,
Freezing on the walk,
Make the good old deacon
Indulge in naughty talk.

Little grains of sand,
Lifted with the water,
Make the gasping bather
Say words he hadn't ought'er.

VI

Old Mother Hubbard
Went to the cupboard—
She did it from force of habit;
But when she got there,
Instead of a hare,
She found but a little Welch-rabbit.

The Woodpecker

ON another page of this volume appears the picture of the writing staff of the Woodpecker—an organ devoted to the promotion of the best interests of Bucknell University. Created only last spring, this philosophically critical journal led a career as brilliant as it was brief; as successful as mysterious. A glance at the purpose of this paper and the “Jekyll and Hyde” existence of its contributors is sufficient proof of the truth of the foregoing sweeping statements.

The Woodpecker was at once the bitterest enemy and the truest friend of the college administration. Without fear or favor, this bird consistently and persistently stuck its bill beneath the bark of the faculty-tree; pulled out and hammered to death the worms that threatened to bore the very vitals out of the college in general and the students in particular. The Orange and Blue, that scion of black-mail and Hearstism, the corrupting influence of the Minstrels as well as the follies and foibles of the Ministerial contingent, the blinding opacity of the Library electric light, the dangers of bankruptcy besetting the Athletic Association on every side by the biblical and grindical jukement of season-ticket sellers, the fallacious syllogisms of Calvinistic logic, the registrar's tremendous inroads upon funds lawfully belonging to Miss Sundae and Mr. Nicotine, the immoral tone of David Baldwin's double, the sociological bomb-shells, balloons, and gaseous volcanoes of the hot-air dynamo in the Library—all these and a host of other equally deleterious tendencies have been exposed, condemned, and hotly branded by that mighty sub rosa publication, the Woodpecker.

Nor have the obnoxious eccentricities of the individual—student or teacher—been able to escape the keen eye and sharp bill of the bird with the hammer. The deadly war waged upon dress and conduct has swept everything before it, rich and poor, high and low; and has resulted in a veritable carnage of piccadilly collars, rainbow-tinged socks, ear-warping dips, and other Easter-egg paraphernalia. Mannerisms, likewise, have been given no quarter. The windmill paddling of Pop Perine has been supplanted by a more nearly human and mundane gesture. Bessie Nevins has brought his pace down to a 2:40 clip, and bids well to reduce the same to a regular goose trot. Barkman's Derby hat has been transferred to the block of Greasy Boyer, who promises to sell it to Corll and invest the proceeds in a pair of knee-bags for his trousers. That chemical concoction known as Prof. Tilly—thanks to the Woodpecker—has been precipitated into a tub of  $H_2O$  at least twice since the Woodpecker returned last autumn. And mirabile dictu! Brother Langford has made arrangements with a sheep-shearing house to have his hair cut before Commencement time. These astounding corrections of erratic mental equipment and balance have been made possible only through the wholesome pecking of the bird, which, true to its motto, “knocks but saves the tree.”

Unique as was the Woodpecker in general, it nevertheless possessed a trait common at least to all truly great men, namely, a decreed death as soon as its noble work was completed. Moses, the Hebrew leader, immediately upon bringing his people through the wilderness and enjoying merely a look into the Promised Land, was called home to his Master. Cyrus, the matchless Persian general, after conquering all heathen

Asia with its king, Croesus, went to his reward. So, too, did Alexander the Great, after conquering all the world; and the imperial Cæsar on the evening of his triumphs and conquests went out to meet his God. Our immortal Lincoln's death is also exemplary of the fate of the eminently great man, who, as a rule, dies synchronously with the culmination of his marvellous work. Like these heroes in the glorious galaxy of the world's heroism, then, the Woodpecker has completed the work for which it was born; and instantly upon the consummation of its work it has passed away to receive the reward of the good and faithful servant, "Well done! enter thou into the joys prepared for thee!"

The Woodpecker now is dead,
Its peck we'll hear no more,
Unless its victims backward tread
And make the little bird sore.

If you talk about your flunks, boys,
And tell that you have four,
The "Profs" will think you like 'em
And plaster you with more.

"Say, Burpee, do you have any chewing on your clothes?" asked the clock, one day, as the Professor was about to take his weekly exercise winding up the big fellow's motor apparatus.

Burpee was about to lie and say that he had just given the last to Jack Gibney, when the upraised hand of the clock and its threat to strike brought him to his senses. Reluctantly he handed out a full, new package of fine-cut. The clock took the package and placed a good-sized chew in each of his faces, remarking as he did so:

"You chew the same brand that 'Mick' Sheehan does."

"Yes, and you take the same size chew that 'Mick' does," sadly remarked the Professor as he tossed the empty tobacco bag down over the roof.

A charming girl is little Lou,
With pearls for teeth, large eyes of blue;
Enticing smiles play on her cheek,
And when she tries, she looks quite meek.

I said to her, one summer day,
"What would you do if I, in play,
Should gently kiss you on your brow—
Come, what's the answer? Tell me now."

She looked at me with savage scorn,
And made me wish I were not born—
So dumb. She said, "You idiot,
I'm sure I'd call you down a bit."

Picked up at the Sem

DEAR MISS W.—It's inconvenient to "skip" the chaperon when you go to ball-games. Don't do it next time—"Next time," ah me! next time will be after Washington's birthday, 22nd inst.

Respectfully yours, T. A. E.

Miss B.—Boating is dangerous—very. It must be done on water—don't. Do not go off the campus for the present without a sponsor acceptable to myself or Miss Bush. Any future decision will be communicated by Dr. Harris or myself.

Regretfully, yet sincerely yours, T. A. E.

To the Misses R. and others at present assembled in rooms 3-5.—Please remember that an assembly of students in rooms during study hours without permission is contrary to order. This hour is for study—will the young ladies who do not belong in the rooms please withdraw quietly to their own rooms.

Sincerely yours, T. A. E.

DEAR MISS K.—Miss Isaac was obliged to report you for non-observance of 10 o'clock rule, February 7th. Please note that the rule is not for breaking, but for the maintenance of good order. Time enough before ten—(?).

It would seem that the offense reported was not the first.

Don't repeat.

Sincerely yours, T. A. E.

Miss S. M.—Kindly note that delinquencies are charged as follows—on record against your name:

1. Loitering with escort after B. B. Game Saturday evening.
2. Skipping to town Tuesday P. M., 1-2 o'clock.
3. None too regular to evening chapel.

Please correct. It's bad to go on book.

Sincerely yours, T. A. E.

Miss W.—Mrs. Thomas called to see you to say that she is going away and is expecting you to come to the Academy as soon as possible after luncheon to mind the babies, etc. You doubtless understand better than I do about your duties when you get there. My simple stipulation is that you do assiduously abide THERE until you return to your wonted haunt. See? Don't gallivant!

Sincerely yours, T. A. E.

DEAR MISS L.—Miss Isaac reports an irregularity of conduct on your part last evening. On referring to the book I find a similar report of recent date, which I am afraid, on account of too many things to do at that time, I allowed to pass. A third report would put a serious aspect on the case. Don't let it appear. Rules are not for the breaking. It seems that the offense has become almost habitual.

Kindly take notice.

Gleanings from the Class Room

GEBHARDT—"Mind is composed of seeds of atoms."

HILBISH—"Pythagoras taught the astronimal side of philosophy."

PROF. SIMPSON (in Physics)—"Bolton, define work."

BOLTON—"Studying Physics, Professor."

DR. HARRIS—"What is pain(Payne) of hunger?" With one accord we looked at Guy.

PROF. LINDEMANN (in Strength of Materials)—"Hains, what is a hollow shaft?"

HAINS—"A speaking-tube."

DR. GROFF—"Mr. Payne, where would you go to secure specimens of the yeast plant?"

PAYNE—"I would go to a brewery." Guy, we never would have believed it of you!

VANWHY to PROF. DAVIS—"Professor, what bird is it that carries another little bird on its back?"

PROF. DAVIS—"I suppose you are thinking of the stork, Mr. VanWhy."

GRANFIELD TO DR. HARRIS—"What is the question, Professor?"

BALDWIN—"Plato discovered the seasons."

FETTER, '09 (translating Livy)—"A battle was fought between the Sophomores and the Freshmen."

MISS MEYER, '09—"The battle would have been ended if it had not been finished."

FRIES, '09—"The elephant bore Hannibal with one eye."

FRITZ, '09—Translating at sight, the remainder of the class prompting him:—

ROBY—"Let him alone! he has almost as much brains as the rest of you."

STOCKEBRAND, '10—"He was forced by Zeus." Professor, "No, by Zeus! He was forced."

KRESGE, '10—"The shell-fish and the turbot, soaked with whiskey."

PROF. HARE (calling the roll in Logic)—"Mr. Ray—I mean Mr. Way."

PROF. NEVINS—"Miss Gibson, I wish you would persuade Mr. Wright not to cut class."

FETTER, '09—"A certain soldier was struck by thunder."

O'BRIEN—"Law is a moral aspect."

PROF. HEIM—"Mr. Bertin, why are you so sure that your answer is right?"

BERTIN—"Because Manchester told me."

PREXY (in Ethics)—"Miss Evans, why are you not more familiar with the laws which govern chicken stealing in Pennsylvania?"

The "Joe Bings" of 1908

WITH APOLOGIES TO THE ORIGINAL "JOE."

Dave Hawk, he cut ten stiffs right up
From rise to set o' sun;
He cut them, an' he skinned them, too—
Yes, sir, that's w'at Dave done.
To cut ten stiffs right up, I vow,
Is one tremenjuss chore—
Dave Hawk cut his behind the stove
In Prowant's clothing store.

Rube Shrum, he broke eight hearts of gurls,
I swan, an' tore them, too,
An' in twelve hours by the clock
Rube was entirely thru.
He could, I guess, before he slept,
Broke jes' as many more—
He broke them where Dave cut the stiffs—
In Prowant's clothing store.

Zeke Royer chewed up four pounds onct
Of Polar Bear so sweet;
An' 'fore the sun had near gone down,
The job was all complete.
Zeke Royer never had to spit,
Wa'n't sick, ner leas' bit sore;
He chewed it all in one short day—
In Prowant's clothing store.

Ches Niple made five touchdowns onct
When Gettysburg was here;
He done it all in jes' an hour,
With time for a long cheer.
He could as well 'a' kept it up
A dozen hours or more.
Where was it done? The same ol' place—
In Prowant's clothing store.

John Cure, he made a big long jump,
He ploughed right thru the air;
He tried to jump the river o'er—
He did, I do declare.
When half-way out from Bucknell shore,
He jumped hisself right back,
And landed where he was before—
Right in the same ol' track.

WINCHESTER

REPEATING RIFLES FOR HUNTING.

In the Spring the wily woodchuck is quarry worthy of the rifleman's skill. Riflemen differ as to what caliber cartridge is best adapted to "chucking," but all agree that the rifle for this, as for all kinds of hunting, is some one of the nine different Winchester models. For results, always use Winchester guns for all your shooting and Winchester make of cartridges in all your guns.

Need a New Ceiling?

If your old ceiling needs renewing, there are three reasons why you should let us put on a metal ceiling:—

1—Indestructibility—Once this ceiling is in, that's a'l. No more expenses, and only the destruction of the building can destroy the ceiling.

2—Dustproofness. The ordinary ceiling is a continuous dust shaker. Our metal ceiling lets through no dust and gives down no dust.
